This was strictly attended to by calling over their names before their respective Conferences.

Quest. 13. Who have died this year?

Joseph Harris—a native of Granville county, North Carolina. His parents were respectable and pious, and taught him in early life the genuine principles of Christianity. In Sept., 1811, he sought, and at a camp meeting found, the "pearl of great price," the forgiveness of sins. Thus united to God by faith, he looked around and beheld the whole world lying in wickedness. His mind now being filled with light from Heaven, he thought, were the greatest sinner on earth present, he could put him in possession of correct views of the plan of salvation! The Spirit of the Lord was as fire in his bones, and he began immediately to warn sinners to flee the wrath to come; and in the year 1813 gave himself up wholly to the great work of the ministry; entered the itinerary, and was appointed to travel Terrel circuit; in 1814, Nouse. At the Conference held in 1815, he was ordained deacon, and appointed to Bedford circuit; in 1816 he was stationed in Richmond; in 1817 he was transferred to the Conference, and stationed in Newbern, and in 1818 at Petersburg, where he finished his course.

In all these stations he manifested abundantly, by his presence, all pious conversation, and ministerial labors, that he had been called of God to preach the gospel. This excellent young man was remarkable for his love to men universally, his charity to the poor, his readiness to relieve the distressed, and his constant and fervent devotion to God, his heavenly Father. Humility in an eminent degree attended him both in private and in public.

In the pulpit it was manifest in his prayers, sermons, and exhortations. Who had that the pleasure of sitting under his ministry did not feel his heart either charmed or ravished by the brilliancy of this heavenly grace! To us it seemed that the Lord had designed him to be a minister of great and extensive usefulness, having blessed him with a strong and penetrating mind, and powers of persuasion which drew and fixed the attention of both saints and sinners.

"But his morning went down eoo noon."

During his affliction, which was long and severe, he had, as might have been expected, to drink of a mixed cup. But though the adversity of men did sometimes thrust at him sorely, yet he was enabled by the grace of God to rejoice in tribulations; and would call frequently on those who attended him to sing and pray. At one time he said, "Sing and let this bodily fail, And let it faint or die; My soul shall quit the mortal vale, And soar to worlds on high; And let its lonely soul rest, In the Redeemer's bosom." And at another time—"Jesus can make a dying bed Feel soft as downy pillows are, While on his breast I lean my head, And breathe my life out sweetly there."

It is stated by those who attended his bed of languishing, that, blessed with the presence of his dying savior, he would shout aloud the praise of God: that a few days prior to his death, being supported in his bed, he preached to those present his last sermon, from "Receive us, we have wandered no man." Immediately after which he shook hands with all around, bidding them an affectionate farewell.

He then said, "Glory to God, Jesus smiled and held our souls in Bounty A friend present said, "Brother Harris, this is not dying;" "No," said he, "it is living for ever!" Then turning to his worming brother, he said, "Tell the preachers at Conference, that I died in the triumphs of faith; that my last doctrine is, free salvation." He then mentioned by name his aged parents, brothers, and sisters, and sent them in affectionate and last farewell. On September 11th, about 10 o'clock, A. M., his brother, anxious to hear the sound of his voice once more, said, "Brother Fletcher, you are going to leave us." "Pardon," said he, and in a few minutes sunk in death! But the soul, the immortal part, arose, ascended on high, and mingleth with celestial spirits in the New Jerusalem, where "Saints immortal praise, Infinite day's hebreus of night, And pleasures boundless pain.

2. Thomas Lacey, a native of Maryland, was born in Prince George's county on the 6th day of June, 1772 (old style). After continuing in the backwoods of nature and the practice of vice till about the 40th year of his age, he was awakened to a full view of his guilt and misery by the ministry of Mr. Teddy, and other Methodist ministers of that day. He obtained peace with God, and became a member of the Methodist society about the beginning of the revolutionary war. In the year 1777, or 1778, he became a Methodist preacher, and after laboring a considerable time successfully as a local preacher, he was called to a more extensive sphere of action in the travel for ministry, and commenced travelling on Baltimore circuit, June the 5th, 1791. From that time he continued to travel as a faithful and successful labourer, until the infirmities of old age abated his progress. He then received a superannuated relation, which he retained to the day of his death. In the year 1816 he was struck with a paralytic affection, from which time to the day of his dissolution he was a man of great affliction. In his last illness he would frequently exclaim that a death-bed was a poor time and place to make preparation for future happiness; but at the same time would express, with thankfulness to God, the assurance he felt, that his work was done, and that he was ready to be offered up. Thus he continued to suffer is pain and patience till the 11th of January, 1819, when he yielded up his spirit to God, in the eighty-seventh year of his age.

3. Joseph Swayne, a native of England, was born about the year 1712, and emigrated to America in the early part of his life, settled himself, and married in the state of Maryland. In a short time after, he was happily brought to an acquaintance with the Methodist Church, and soon conceived it to be his duty to warn the people of God was both fervent and sincere, and he never appeared to be better satisfied than when in company with his brethren in the ministry.

In 1816 he was appointed to Severn circuit; and in 1817 and 1818 to Harford. In this circuit his labours were greatly blessed.

After the disorder of which he died (the prevailing epidemic fever) had been fixed for several days, he left his circuit and retired to Baltimore for the purpose of obtaining medical aid. His brothers, a physician in the city, altered at the apparent danger of his situation, called to his assistance several of the most eminent physicians of the city, who kindly afforded him aid. But alas! all human efforts were now unavailing; the die was cast; and after a painful struggle of ten days from the time he arrived in town, he died, on the 22d of January, 1819.

For a few days in the beginning of the fatal disorder which terminated his mortal life he was subject to great agitation and distress of mind; but the conflict soon closed in peace and triumph, which continued, without intermission, till his happy spirit entered into the perfect joy of his Lord.

Our beloved brother Bond possessed a clear discerning and a sound judgment. His knowledge in divinity was far from being superficial. He was fond of reading, patient of long preparations in investigation and diligent in all the duties of his Christian and ministerial profession. But he rests from his labours, and his works follow him.

4. John Wesley Bond, born in Baltimore, state of Maryland, December 11, 1784. He was disposed to travel, and at an early age was apprenticed to the sea, but not for the purpose of seeing his latest break. He was appointed. John Weslevon the 22d of January, 1819, for the purchase of the property of Zion. His attachment to the people of God was both fervent and sincere, and he never appeared to be better satisfied than when in company with his brethren in the ministry. From several months of anxiety, he seemed to gather the hopefulness of the grave long before his dissolution. A short time prior to his death, he attended a camp meeting in the county of Prince William, Va., principally for the purpose of seeing his Christian friends once more, and taking his final leave of them in this world. It was with great difficulty and pain that he reached his residence again, after having accomplished this object. From this time he was greatly confined, and sunk with anxiety; so much so, that he appeared to have entertained little if any hope of recovery; and indeed he manifested a greater desire to die than to live; hence, when his brethren prayed with him, he requested that they would not pray for his restoration; but that he might have a quick and easy exit from this glorious eternity.

In the midst of his most excruciating pains he praised the Lord aloud, and clapped his hands, exclaiming, "Glory, glory, glory!" But alas! all human efforts were now unavailing; the die was cast; and after a painful struggle of ten days from the time he arrived in town, he died, on the 22d of January, 1819.

For a few days in the beginning of the fatal disorder which terminated his mortal life he was subject to great agitation and distress of mind; but the conflict soon closed in peace and triumph, which continued, without intermission, till his happy spirit entered into the perfect joy of his Lord.

Our beloved brother Bond possessed a clear discerning and a sound judgment. His knowledge in divinity was far from being superficial. He was fond of reading, patient of long preparations in investigation and diligent in all the duties of his Christian and ministerial profession. But he rests from his labours, and his works follow him.

5. Joseph TouTen,—our dearly beloved brother, was born in the township of Hurst, county of Monmouth, New Jersey, on the 4th day of February, 1759. From an authentic document we learn that he was reared in Philadelphia, and lived what was called a moral life, until he heard the Methodist preachers, when he was deeply convinced of sin, and after a painful struggle he obtained a sense of pardoning mercy, and immediately united himself to the Methodist Church. He soon became conspicuous as an exhorter in leader, and was useful to many in his neighbourhood.

After receiving his last appointment at the Philadelphia Conference, he returned to his greater on Staten Island, in the month of May. He left Staten Island May 10th preached in the meeting-house at Westfield, from 1 Cor. ii., 2," For I determined not to know any thing among you as I came among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." After service he descended from the pulpit, and walked, with his wife, into the doorway of the house, and exclaimed, "There I wish to be buried," as though he apprehended his end was nigh.

He left Staten Island May 17th preached in Philadelphia on the Saturday following, and preached three times on the Sabbath, and again on Tuesday following. It was remarked by his friends that divine energy attended the truth which he delivered. This he evening declared, before retiring to rest, that he was "very well; but how uncertain is life! Early the next morning he was taken unwell—some means were applied which appeared to be temporary relief—others were preparing. In the mean time he went into the yard, and the barking of the dog lead-Sussex county, state of Delaware, and was born October, 1741. His parents, who were among the first Methodists in these parts, endeavored "to train him up in the way in which he should walk." His moral development in childhood and youth was not a matter of concern as much as of necessity of a change of heart, and sought and found the Lord in the pardon of his sins. He found this pearl of great price in a box-feast, on the 12th of December, 1800, ten days after which he attached himself to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In June, 1841, he professed to experience a deeper work of grace in soul sent to the Liturgical circuit, which at the same time was recommended to the Philadelphia Annual Conference (held in April, 1841) to become a preacher, when he was appointed as a district, and appointed to Cambridge circuit, Eastern Shore of Maryland.
In 1816 he was appointed to Essex and Staten Island. In February, 1817, he married; and in the same year was appointed to New-Jersey, where his health began to fail early in the month of July. His condition appeared to be hopeless, and it was thought advisable that he should travel to the southward; accordingly he went to his father's house in October, and spent the winter there. The short time the change of climate seemed to be of advantage to him; but as the cold weather came on he grew worse, and passed the winter in great of body. In May his disease considerably abated, in consequence of which he was enabled to take a little exercise, until the month of June, when he relapsed, and his sufferings continued. About the middle of winter he had an opportunity of fulfilling his wishes. At praying meeting held in his father's house he stood up and gave out these words, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," from which he preached about four minutes, and then falling back on the bed, he observed that his work was finished.

Death was a topic on which he frequently conversed through the course of his illness; and in the last two weeks of his life he spoke of his own death with apparent satisfaction. On one occasion he remarked, "that he had given up all expectation of living much longer, and that he waited with earnest expectation for the moment to arrive when he should exchange his sufferings for heaven." About ten days before his death he gave some directions about his burial, and desired that he be permitted to be buried in the church, and that he be permitted to wash his hands, and after his death that he should be permitted to preach his funeral sermon. He said, "Give my love to brother Force, and to all my other brethren.
Dearly beloved, if he had any temptations he replied, "None." For several days before his death he seemed to have anticipated peace of mind, and the strongest confidence in God.
His dissolution was expected for several days; the period of his death arrived, and he appeared to his work.

As a preacher, he was zealous, industrious, and sometimes even rigid. The function of the gospel was the principal and constant object of his life and labours. He was a man of weak nerves, but of uncommon endurance, and laborious, acceptable, and useful. He laboured far beyond his strength, and may say to have fallen a victim to his labours. As a disciplinarian, he was a zealous and industrious, laborious, and sacred, and the calmness and forbearance with which he met his trials and sorrows, was a model of grace for those who follow him.

Stephen Jacobi.—He was born in the town of Warwick, on the 23rd of February, 1769, of pious parents. His father, Richard, and Jacob, was at the time a Methodist preacher, who was ordained a deacon at the Conference held in New-York, A.D.
1795; and after spending the greatest part of the following winter in preaching the gospel in some new settlements in the neighborhood of Lake Champlain, he was about to return home in the middle of May, 1796, when, in attempting to swim his horse across a small stream called Schu­ haro river, he was drowned. He does not appear that Stephen, the subject of this memoir, although religiously educated, was much concerned about the years of age; from time to time he became more thoughtful, and was variously exercised concerning religious duties. In the month of June, 1810, he happily experienced the justifying and renewing grace of God. Soon after he was converted he began to be concerned for the welfare of his fellow-creatures, and at times to pray with and exhort them to flee from the wrath to come. These exercises soon attracted the attention of his brothers, and he was licensed as an exporter on Cambridge circuit, January 10, 1811. His first licence to preach was dated on Saratoga conference, March 38th, 1812. He was recommended to the New-York Annual Conference, and admitted on trial in the travelling ministry, and stationed on Greenville circuit.
In 1813 he was appointed to Westmoreland circuit, in the Goscusa, where he suffered much affliction of body.
In 1816 he was stationed on Ilinois circuit; but in consequence of ill health his labours were chiefly confined to Grove circuit, where he was stationed on Illinois circuit; and in 1818, in New­Haven. In 1819 he received his appointment as a circuit rider, and stationed on New York, where he finished his course in peace and triumph on Sabbath, the 17th of January, 1819.
Our brother Stephen was possessed of strong natural powers of mind, which were much improved by regular and diligent application to study. His apprehension and ability to teach children were very remarkable, and his expositions of the dogmas of the gospel were comprehensive and clear, and his method of illustrating and applying them were a model of patience and resignation during a long and severe affliction, and the calmness and forbearance with which he met his trials and sorrows, was a model of grace for those who follow him. that he should recover. However, he unanimously professed a confidence in God, and a desire that his will should be done; but in his last moments, while viewing himself in the arms of death, his soul was in holy triumph; and in answer to the following questions, "Does perfect love cast out fear? Are you happy?" he replied, "No fear—happy." Heaven be true in view, &c. &c. When no longer able to speak, he raised his hands in tokens of victory. Thus, after a long and tedious illness, on Saturday evening, a.m., April 24th, 1819, his happy soul returned to God, in the thirty-third year of his age, and seventh of his ministry.

His funeral was attended on the following Monday, and a sermon delivered from 1 Thess. iv, 14: "Far we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

9. Jason Walker,—a native of Ashby, state of Massachusetts, born February 17th, 1803. He became a subject of renewing grace and joined the Methodist society when about seventeen years of age. He successfully filled the offices of class-leader, exhorter, and local preacher, until, in June, 1813, he was received on trial for the following circuits: Wethersfield, 1813; Barre, 1815; Bristol, Somerset, 1816; Deerfield, 1817; and labour till the first of October. From 1818, he received an appointment to the following circuits: Vincennes, Little Pigeon, 1819.

At the Conference held in June, 1818, he received an appointment to Warwick, and continued to travel and labour till the first of October. From this time he continued under the painful affliction of a lingering consumption.
April 10th, 1819, when he closed his suf-ferrings and his life together in Smithfield, Rhode Island. Humility, zeal, patience, and fortitude which terminated his earthly existence. At the Conference held in June,
