The Wofford College Athletic Department has announced the naming of Tim Dunlavey as its head women's golf coach.

Dunlavey, a Class A PGA of America member, will also continue to serve as the Terriers' assistant men's golf coach.

A two-time All-ACC selection at Virginia, Dunlavey earned Carolinas PGA Player of the Year honors in 1995 and 2000. He is also a two-time South Carolina State Open champion. For winning the 2000 CPGA Section Championship, he earned an exemption for the 2001 Worldcom Heritage Classic and the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic.

"I'm very excited about the chance to work with the women's team and be a collegiate head coach," Dunlavey said. "I believe it will challenge me as a golf professional and give me a unique opportunity to have a positive impact.

"Working with the men's team has really helped give me a feel for the family atmosphere at Wofford. Stepping into this new position, I already have a base knowledge of some of the people involved in the department and the school as well."

Dunlavey played in the 2000 PGA Championship and missed the cut by just one stroke. He placed 47th at the 1994 U.S. Open. He was also a member of the 1996 NIKE Tour.

"We're very grateful for Tim taking on the additional duties with our women's program," Wofford Athletic Director David Wood said. "In a short period of time, he has already had a very positive influence on our men's team.

"Tim is an outstanding teacher. We're very excited and fortunate to have him expanding his role in our athletic program."

A 1991 graduate of Virginia, Dunlavey worked as an assistant coach for one year at his alma mater.

Dunlavey and his wife, Elizabeth, have two children: David, age 4, and Kate, age 2.
