

‘Rocky Horror Show’

Students in the pulp theatre Interim course rehearse for “The Rocky Horror Show,” which will be performed at 8 p.m. today through Saturday in the Sallenger Sisters Black Box Theatre.

By Brandi Wylie '24

Wofford College’s pulp theatre Interim course will perform the college’s first musical in more than seven years when it takes the stage for “The Rocky Horror Show” today through Saturday.

Hailie Gold '23, a theatre and English double major from Greenville, South Carolina, is directing the production. She says the cast and crew have put in ample work to make the production something to be proud of.

“We get here (for rehearsal) at 10 a.m. and don’t leave until 6 p.m.,” Gold says. “Sometimes we will come in after hours to hang curtains, paint floors, repaint floors, do anything we can to get the show ready.”

Tickets are free for the Wofford and Spartanburg community on a first-come, first-served basis. The show will be performed each night at 8 p.m. The box office will open at 7 p.m. Performances will take place in the Sallenger Sisters Black Box Theater in the Rosalind Sallenger Richardson Center for the Arts.

A discussion on reconciliation

The Rodney Cook Sr. Peace Park in Vine City, a historically Black neighborhood in Atlanta, Georgia, is the topic of a talk today at 3 p.m. in Leonard Auditorium.

The founder and president of the National Monuments Foundation, Rodney Mims Cook Jr., will visit Wofford College at 3 p.m. today for a discussion titled “The Atlanta Way Can Lead Us Back to Reconciliation: 300 Years of Georgia Peacemakers.” It will take place in Leonard Auditorium, and it is free and open to the public.

The discussion will center around the multi-year campaign to build Rodney Cook Sr. Peace Park, which serves as an urban greenspace and innovative tool for watershed management in Vine City. The park also is an arts memorial to Georgia’s peacemakers and people who worked toward racial reconciliation.

Lessons in leadership

Dr. Marjorie Hass will be on Wofford's campus in February for several events.

Dr. Marjorie Hass, the president of the Council of Independent Colleges (CIC), will be on Wofford's campus in February to present a lecture and to conduct a leadership workshop for women.

Hass will give a lecture, "The Virtues of Leadership: Courage, Compassion and Grace," at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 9, in the Jerome Johnson Richardson Theatre. Hass will draw on her leadership successes, as well as her background as a philosopher, speaking about the ethical values of leadership, and if these are gendered.

President Nayef Samhat will host a reception preceding the lecture from 5-6 p.m. in the front lobby of the Rosalind Sallenger Richardson Center for the Arts. The event is free and open to the public.

The next day, Hass will conduct a workshop titled "The Practice of Leadership." The workshop will be held from 2:30-4:30 p.m. in the Harley Room of the Richardson Physical Activities Building.

Josh Riley '11 could once be found cheering on the Terriers in Boss' uniform.

Now, Riley wears a different boss' uniform as chief operating officer of Sully's Steamers, a bagel sandwich shop with locations throughout the Carolinas. The shop opened its newest location in Suite C of The Hub, located at 578 N. Church St., directly across from Wofford College's campus.

The restaurant officially opened on Dec. 1 and proved to be a hit with the Wofford community, with students and faculty alike frequenting the shop for breakfast and lunch during the last two weeks of the fall semester.
