Campus Community:

This week is Severe Weather Awareness Week. Wofford will participate with Spartanburg County Emergency Management Office tomorrow morning (Tuesday, March 5) in a statewide tornado warning DRILL (weather permitting). This is in conjunction with the NOAA All-Hazards weather radio alerts as well.

Wofford will activate our outdoor sirens at 9 a.m. in conjunction with the county sirens. We also will send a TEST alert through our RAVE Emergency Alert System.

Please take this opportunity to familiarize yourself with the appropriate severe weather assembly area by reviewing the attached list. These are the locations that students and employees should immediately go to should there be an actual severe weather warning.

PLEASE REMEMBER THAT THIS IS ONLY A DRILL.

Dear Colleagues,

Kaye, Beate, and I would like to share with you the message we sent to public school administrators in Districts 1-7 of Spartanburg County about the upcoming AVD High Impact Fellows inaugural year summit (Saturday, Apr 27, 9 am-2 pm). Please feel free to share the message widely, and we warmly encourage you to attend as well. The event is open to the public, and all community members are welcome.

Thanks so much for your support of Year 1 of this new endeavor.

Laura Barbas Rhoden

Dear Teachers, Principals, and Administrators:

Need a fresh perspective at the end of the school year? Interested in hearing & sharing great ideas about teaching? If the answer to either question (or both!) is “yes,” we invite you to join us at our teaching summit on Saturday, April 27, from 9 am – 2 pm in the Olin Building at Wofford College.

The summit centerpiece is the work that Arthur Vining Davis High Impact Fellows teams have carried out this past year. Sixteen teams – each comprised of a high school teacher, a college faculty member, and a college student – collaborated to develop curricular units for high school classrooms, and they are ready to share their projects. Why? They want to energize learning experiences ... for teachers, students, and the community at large. For you.

What do you need to know?

- You can register for the summit here:
<http://tinyurl.com/HighImpactFellowsSummit>
- At the summit, teams will present curricular units, and you can pick up curricular materials for use in your school or classroom.
- Summit presentations will happen in four concurrent tracks: English & language arts; foreign languages; social studies & business education; sciences & math.
- We’re inviting summit attendees to a complimentary lunch with AVD teams so you can exchange ideas in a relaxed setting.
- We can provide you with a letter documenting attendance for your professional development file, if you like.
- We’ll hold a drawing at lunch for door prizes for participants who fill out our summit evaluation form.

We look forward to seeing you at the summit. For more information, please feel free to be in touch through our e-mail address: highimpactfellows@wofford.edu.

in touch through our e-mail address: nignimpactfellows@wofford.edu.

Subject: MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT DUNLAP: Wofford-Converse Joint Study Committee Report
Date: March 7, 2013 at 9:40 AM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu

To: Wofford Faculty & Staff
From: Bernie Dunlap

Thus far in its monthly meetings, the Wofford-Converse Joint Study Committee has concentrated on a discussion of possible “big idea” collaborations and on clarification of potential donors’ expectations. As summarized by our facilitator, there appear to be 3 primary criteria for major funding of any joint undertaking: that it

1. Could be accomplished by both acting together, but not by either working singly
2. Will have a significant, positive, social/economic effect on the region
3. Is an “indissoluble step” toward a union of the two institutions

I should emphasize that, to this point, no conclusions have been reached and no decisions made. The committee’s immediate concern is to survey collaborative efforts to which Wofford and Converse are currently committed and to consider other ways in which enhancements and efficiencies might be achieved—both academically and operationally. We anticipate extending this discussion in the very near future to include our broader communities.

Be Mindful of Personal Health

If you have a chronic condition like hypertension or diabetes, a carefully planned diet can have a significant impact on managing your symptoms and improving your health. During National Nutrition Month®, the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics encourages consumers to develop a healthful eating plan that is centered on personal health concerns and "Eat Right, Your Way, Every Day."

While many people understand the role diet plays in overall health, you can actually prevent and manage specific diseases by eating healthfully. For instance, eating heart-healthy foods can help lower high blood pressure, which reduces the risk of both heart attack and stroke. Even if you do not have high blood pressure, eating a heart-healthy diet reduces your chances of heart disease in the future.

A healthy eating plan that keeps health concerns in mind will also incorporate individual needs including personal nutrient requirements, food preferences, lifestyle and level of physical activity.

As part of this public education campaign, the Academy's National Nutrition Month website (<http://www.eatright.org/nnm>) includes a variety of helpful tips, games, promotional tools and nutrition education resources, all designed to spread the message of good nutrition around the "Eat Right, Your Way, Every Day" theme.

National Nutrition Month 2013

March is National Nutrition Month. This year marks the 40th anniversary of National Nutrition Month®. This is a perfect time to consider better food choices and eating habits and to begin incorporating small changes into your diet — like reducing your fat intake and eating more green vegetables and leaner protein. The goal of National Nutrition Month is not so much to turn everyone into health nuts, but to make small dietary changes which, over time, can play a significant role in improving health.

The National Nutrition Month® 2013 theme, "Eat Right, Your Way, Every Day," encourages personalized healthy eating styles based on the 2010 Dietary Guidelines and MyPlate while recognizing that food preferences, lifestyle, cultural and ethnic traditions, and health concerns all impact individual food choices. By following guidelines set in place by MyPlate, you can create healthy and nutritious meals while eating what best fits your lifestyle and personality. Here are a few tips to fill your plate wisely:

Make half your plate fruits and vegetables.

Eat a variety of vegetables, especially dark-green, red and orange vegetables plus beans and peas. Fresh, frozen and canned vegetables all count but choose low sodium canned vegetables. And adding fruits to meals for dessert is pretty easy.

Make at least half your grains whole.

Choose 100% whole-grain breads, cereals, pastas, and brown rice. Check the ingredient list to make sure whole-grain or wheat is at the top of the list.

Vary your protein choices

Eat a variety of foods from the protein food group each week, such as seafood, beans, as well as lean meat, poultry and eggs.

Enjoy your food but eat less.

Get your personal daily calorie limit at www.ChooseMyPlate.gov. Keep that number in mind when deciding what to eat. Avoid oversized portions by using a smaller plate, bowl, and glass. Limit the empty calories (cookies, cakes, etc) but know that they can fit into your daily calorie count occasionally without doing harm. Cook more often at home where you are in control of what's in your food, but when eating out, choose lower calorie menu options. Choose dishes with vegetables, fruits and whole grains. If you wish to drink alcoholic beverages, limit it to one drink a day for women and two a day for men.

Food Logs Work!

Write down everything you eat to keep track of how much you eat and to determine what calorie level works best for your goals.

Be physically active your way.

An important part of weight maintenance and overall health is physical activity. Pick activities that you like and can stick with. Every little bit adds up and health benefits increase as you spend more time being physically active. Aim for at least 2.5 hours or more a week of moderate activity.

De-Stress at Your Desk: Office Yoga

The Palms-Up stretch lengthens the spine and stretches the sides of the rib cage. This simple stretch promotes better posture and improved breathing. Both of which contribute to an increase in energy.

Step-by-Step Instructions:

- 1) Sit slightly forward in your chair, feet flat on the floor, legs bent at a 90 degree angle.
- 2) Contract the abdominal muscles slightly, roll the shoulders back and then down, and lift up through the chest.
- 3) Interlock your fingers together and turn the hands so that the palms face outward.
- 4) As you inhale, reach both arms straight up, palms turned upward towards the sky.
- 5) As you exhale, continue reaching upward but allow your shoulders to slide down the back.

- 6) Continue inhaling, reaching up through arms and rib cage, and exhaling, sliding shoulders down.
- 7) Try NOT to let your rib-cage pop forward. Draw your lower ribs in and down while reaching up.
- 8) Breath here for 3-5 complete breaths, then relax your arms down and shake them out.

The Fat Burning Zone

Myths & Truths

A popular myth is that there is a specific range of heart rates in which you must exercise to burn fat. Even many cardio machines display a “fat-burning zone” on their panels, encouraging people to exercise in a specific heart rate range. Have you ever wondered if you really have to exercise in a specific heart rate zone to lose fat? And what happens if you venture out of that zone?

You use both fat and carbohydrates for energy during exercise, with these two fuels providing that energy on a sliding scale. During exercise at a very low intensity (e.g., slow walking), it is true that a higher proportion of calories burned comes from fat (about 60% as opposed to approximately 35% from high-intensity programs). However, high-intensity exercise still burns more calories from fat in the final analysis.

As exercise intensity increases up to the lactate threshold (the exercise intensity that marks the transition between exercise that is almost purely aerobic and exercise that includes a significant anaerobic contribution; also considered the highest sustainable aerobic intensity), the contribution from fat decreases while the contribution from carbohydrates increases. When exercising just below the lactate threshold, you are using mostly carbohydrates. Once the intensity of exercise has risen above the lactate threshold, carbohydrates become the only fuel source.

If you exercise long enough (1.5–2 hours), your muscle carbohydrate (glycogen) content and blood glucose concentration become low. This metabolic state presents a threat to the muscles’ survival, since carbohydrates are muscles’ preferred fuel. When carbohydrates are not available, the muscles are forced to rely on fat as fuel.

Since more fat is used at low exercise intensities, people often assume that low-intensity exercise is best for burning fat, an idea that has given birth to the “fat-burning zone.” However, while only a small amount of fat is used when exercising just below the lactate threshold, the rate of caloric expenditure and the total number of calories expended are much greater than they are when exercising at a lower intensity, so the total amount of fat used is also greater.

For example, if you perform 30 minutes of low-intensity aerobic exercise (at a level of 50% of maximal exercise capacity), you'll burn approximately 200 calories. About 120 of those, or 60%, come from fat. However, exercising for the same amount of time at a high intensity (75% of your maximal exercise capacity) will burn approximately 400 calories, and 35% of them, or 140 calories, will come from stored fat. For fat and weight loss, what matters most is the difference between the number of calories you expend and the number of calories you consume. For the purpose of losing weight, it matters little whether the calories burned during exercise comes from fat or carbohydrates.

This Month's Q&A: Ask the Expert

Q: How accurate are calorie counters on cardio machines?

It's important to remember that the calorie counts on machines (or those you get from using any formula) are just estimates and will never be 100% accurate. Cardio machines usually have a computer that uses standard formulas to figure out how many calories you're burning with exercise. These machines and formulas don't always take into account all the factors involved in energy expenditure. Most machines don't take into account your body fat percentage. A person who has a higher percentage of body fat will usually burn less calories than a person with more muscle mass. It also doesn't take into account your fitness level. If you're new to an activity, you'll usually burn more calories than a fit person doing the same activity. Some experts estimate that cardio machines can overestimate calories burned by up to 10-30% so it's best to use them as a benchmark from workout to workout. Instead of relying on calories burned, go by your perceived exertion and/or keep track of your target heart rate. If two machines show the same number of calories burned but one feels easier and keeps your heart rate lower, that's a sign that you're probably burning less calories than you think.

COCONUT OIL:
SHOULD YOU BELIEVE THE HYPE?

In A (Coco)nut Shell: The Condensed Story of Coconut Oil

People make a lot of claims about coconut oil, but there is no well-designed, peer-reviewed, credible scientific evidence to show that coconut oil speeds metabolism, promotes weight loss, cures Alzheimer's disease, improves brain function, or improves heart health. In addition, no evidence exists to prove that "virgin" coconut oil is any less damaging to your heart than other varieties.

Nutritionally speaking, coconut oil contains 9 calories per gram, as do all other fats, making it a calorie-dense food. Probably more importantly is that more than 90% of the fat in coconut oil is saturated fat. Decades of research have determined that saturated fat is detrimental to the health of your heart and blood vessels. That's why healthy adults are advised to consume no more than 10% of their calories in the form of saturated fats. (For people with heart disease--or at high risk for developing it--that amount is even lower: Less than 7% of their calories should come from saturated fat each day.) For a person following a diet of 1,200-1,550 calories per day, their upper limit of saturated fat is 17 grams daily. A single tablespoon of coconut oil contains about 12 grams of saturated fat (and 117 calories) and would bring someone very close to that upper limit--without eating any other sources of saturated fat.

Coconut Oil Can Be Confusing If You're Not a Chemist

When we consume plant and animal sources of fat, we also eat their fatty acids, all of which are structurally different. Coconut oil contains fats with 12-14 carbons. While there is no exact definition as to the number of carbons needed to be classified as a medium-chain fatty acid, most researchers define "medium-chain" as somewhere between 6 and 14 carbons. We know that fats with medium chains (called medium-chain triglycerides or "MCTs") are metabolized much differently than fats with shorter and longer carbon chains. When consumed, MCTs are transported directly from your intestines to the liver, where they are more likely to be burned as fuel, as opposed to shorter and longer chains, which typically get stored as fat in the body. MCTs require fewer enzymes and bile acids for digestion, too.

So, where can you get these amazing MCTs? Many people claim they're found in coconut oil, but that is only a half-truth. Many people who make positive health claims about coconut oil are actually using research on medical-grade MCT oil, which is not available as a dominant source of fat in any food. Also, coconut oil's main fatty acid is lauric acid. This fatty acid, along with coconut oil's myristic and palmitic acids, have been shown to markedly raise LDL ("bad") cholesterol.

Other Coconut Products

Coconut oil isn't the only source of saturated fat. As the popularity of coconut oil increases as the result of "paleo" or "caveman" diet trends, we're seeing more and more coconut products on grocery shelves, too. You'll need to keep a handle on other coconut products, too, as many are also high in saturated fat. Coconut milk, which contains the meat and liquid of coconuts and often comes canned, is rich in calories and fat. A 1/2-cup serving contains 223 calories and 24 grams of fat, 21 of which are saturated--well over one's typical upper limit for saturated fat. Coconut water, on the other hand, does not use the "meat" of the coconut--only the watery liquid inside. Therefore, it does not contain the calories and fat found in coconut oil or shredded coconut meat. A 1-cup serving of coconut water contains 46 calories, 0.5 grams of fat, 0.4 grams of saturated fat, 600 milligrams of potassium and 252 milligrams of sodium, according to data from the USDA. Beware: Recent reports are saying that coconut water is no better than plain old water when it comes to hydration.

The Bottom Line

Don't go cuckoo for coconut oil. There is not any credible research data that proves that coconut aids in weight loss, brain function, or heart health. Think of coconut oil as a condiment, rather than your daily "go-to" oil. Like many things in the world of nutrition, moderation is key. Even if coconut oil were as healthy as people claim it to be, you can have too much of a good thing. This is the case for fats, proteins, fiber, water--pretty much anything you eat or drink. It's all about balance.

EXERCISE TIP

Spring is a good time to start or resume an outdoor or indoor exercise program. The warmer weather can provide the right motivation to get up and start moving. Many exercisers have a sense of joy after they finish each workout. They can take that with them to their job, their home environment and to share with their kids and family.

Part of that is because of the sense of accomplishment and self-esteem boost that you get from completing a work out. In addition, when you exercise, your body releases a chemical that elevates mood. That may help you be more positive and put your daily problems in perspective in the short term. In the long term, that can reduce anxiety, help prevent depression and improve your relationships with others. When you feel good about yourself, you deal more positively with others. Exercise can, and will, will improve your overall quality of life.

The Mighty Mushroom

Mushrooms have been used for thousands of years both as food and for medicinal purposes. About 700 varieties have known medicinal properties.

Mushrooms contain about 80-90% water, and are very low in calories (only 100 cal/oz). They have very little sodium and fat, and 8-10% of the dry weight is fiber. They are an ideal food for persons following a weight management program or a diet for those with high blood pressure.

Mushrooms are an excellent source of potassium, a mineral that helps lower elevated blood pressure and reduces the risk of stroke. One medium portabella mushroom has even more potassium than a banana or a glass of orange juice. One serving of mushrooms also provides about 20-40% of the daily value of copper, a mineral that has cardio-protective properties.

The most commonly consumed mushroom in the United States is the white button mushroom. It has two other forms - Crimini or brown mushrooms with a more earthy flavor and firmer texture, and Portabella mushrooms with a large umbrella-shaped cap and meaty flavor. The latest findings show that white button mushrooms may reduce the risk of breast cancer and prostate cancer.

Shiitake mushrooms have been used for centuries by the Chinese and Japanese to treat colds and flu. Lentinan, a beta-glucan isolated from the fruiting body of shiitake mushrooms, appears to stimulate the immune system, help fight infection, and demonstrates anti-tumor activity.

Recipe Corner

Mushroom Beef Noodle Soup

You don't need much beef in this homey mushroom-beef noodle soup recipe, since mushrooms and a little Worcestershire sauce give it plenty of savory flavor. View more vegetable packed, heart healthy meals at www.eatingwell.com.

Ingredients

- 1/2 ounce dried porcini mushrooms
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 teaspoons canola oil
- 1 1/2 cups chopped celery
- 1 1/2 cups chopped carrots
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 pound cremini mushrooms, chopped
- 1 1/2 cups chopped onion
- 1 pound boneless sirloin or flank steak, trimmed, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1/2 cup dry red wine
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 6 cups reduced-sodium beef broth
- 1 large turnip, peeled and cut into 1/4-inch dice
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups whole-wheat egg noodles, cooked
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley or dill for garnish

Directions

1. Place porcini in a bowl; add boiling water and soak for 10 minutes to soften. Line a sieve with a paper towel, place over a bowl and strain, reserving the liquid; finely chop the porcini and set aside.
2. Heat oil in a soup pot or Dutch oven over medium heat. Cook celery, carrots and garlic, stirring frequently, until softened, 6 to 8 minutes. Transfer to a bowl. Add cremini and onion; cook over medium-high heat, stirring, until browned, 8 to 10 minutes. Transfer to the bowl.
3. Add steak to the pot and cook on medium-high, stirring occasionally, until beginning to brown, 3 to 5 minutes; add tomato paste and cook, stirring, for 30 seconds. Add wine and Worcestershire and cook until the sauce thickens slightly, about 30 seconds. Stir in the porcini and liquid, reserved vegetables, broth, turnip, bay leaf, thyme, pepper and salt; cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until the vegetables are tender, 25 to 30 minutes.
4. Discard the bay leaf. Stir in noodles. Garnish with herbs, if desired.

Subject: MESSAGE FROM KAREN GOODCHILD: Wofford-Converse Request for Ideas
Date: March 7, 2013 at 4:02 PM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu

March 7, 2013

Dear Colleagues,

By now, you have received an e-mail from our President outlining the goals for the Wofford–Converse initiative. As our committee moves forward towards planning a “big idea” the schools might share, we thought it would be a good idea to think small as well, asking two questions: “What are we already sharing?” and “Are there short-term or smaller-scale shared initiatives we can move forward with on our own?” Even if we cannot agree on a satisfactory big idea, we can certainly, beginning now, more effectively work together to provide richer experiences for our students and our larger community.

To this end, we make two requests:

1. Attached to this e-mail, you will find a list of some of the ways the schools collaborate right now. Can you help us flesh out this list by letting us know of initiatives you already have underway involving both schools? These can be as small as sharing funding to bring a speaker or to field an intramural team, or as large as a curricular endeavor. We will gather these and share them with all faculty and staff, hoping they may spur even more connectivity.

2. Additionally, please let us know if there is an idea you would like to further develop or launch. There may be funding for some small-scale initiatives right now.

If you could send both of us your current collaborations or ideas for new ones by March 13, that would be great. We plan to divide the ideas up by type and then to meet in smaller groups very soon to plan how to make things happen.

Please consider being part of this process.

Thank you,

Karen Goodchild GoodchildKH@wofford.edu and Jeff Barker Jeff.Barker@converse.edu

P.S: We are also attaching a recent Chronicle article on shared endeavors between small colleges.

Reading it may inspire ideas.

Existing Wofford-Converse Collaborations

1. Students take courses across the institutions. A few things about this:

a. As a result of work Dan Maultsby, David Wood and Jeff Barker have done, the scope of this agreement has expanded quite a bit in the past ten years. We agreed to open to cross-enrollment each other's January study travel, for example.

b. In addition to the "majors offered jointly" in German and Art History and the allowance of Greek and Chinese to travel as general education requirements, Converse has opened Japanese Language and Culture to Wofford students without charge.

c. In a recent informal agreement, David Wood, Charles Kay (Wofford Philosophy head), Kevin DeLapp (Converse Philosophy head) and Jeff Barker agreed to open the upper level courses of each other's philosophy offerings on a space-available basis, with Converse allowing up to six hours of Wofford courses to count for the major. (The six hour limit is in response to a SACS requirement.)

2. We have shared events as partners (with PC) in the Upstate Confucius Institute. We co-promoted one event at Converse and another at Wofford. In 2011, one Converse student studying Chinese at Wofford was guided in a state-wide competition by Dr. Kinnison and placed second in the state. She was celebrated at both institutions.

3. Converse teaches two levels of Modern Standard Arabic. There have been queries from Wofford faculty on behalf of students and the consistent reply has been that Converse would welcome Wofford students in those courses.

4. In early 2011, a team of Wofford and Converse faculty and administrators developed a joint Community of Scholars program proposal for undergraduate research. The funding did not develop.

5. A student in Philosophy at Wofford is working on a project that involves Music Therapy, one of our degree programs, and an offer of assistance through our faculty has been extended.

6. Converse and Wofford share an endowed scholarship fund managed by the Spartanburg County Foundation that supports students from each institution in law school.

7. Wofford and Converse have maintained a relationship that provides faculty to the other institution in case of sudden, emergency absences. We have shared some faculty in summer adjunct instruction.

8. In 2006-2007, Converse and Wofford offered a joint course in kinetic sculpture that resulted in exhibitions on both campuses.

9. Wofford and Converse jointly pursue the "Johnson Internship," in which a student from each institution (one per semester) works with the Johnson collection of southern art to mount an exhibition.

10. For three years, Converse and Wofford shared a Teagle grant program (with Agnes Scott and UNC-Asheville) on value-added education, which resulted in very significant cooperation in institutional research and assessment, first year programming, and, for Converse, service learning.

11. For the past five to six years, Converse has sent students to give papers in the annual Gender Studies Conference at Wofford. Another student is slated to participate this year. (Upstate also sends students to this event.)

12. Wofford faculty from art and art history will be meeting with Converse faculty to consider how we might share our resources, especially to foster a studio minor at Wofford.

14. Wofford and Converse have cooperated and in some cases co-produced other one-off events, including:

- a. the 2003 South Carolina Humanities Festival
- b. The Art History departments at both institutions are pooling funding to bring filmmaker Ellen Weisbrod in April for two days of events this April
- c. Wofford and Converse, along with the Chapman Cultural Center, have won a grant to bring Tibetan Monks to the Cultural Center in Oct. 2013. These Monks will lead a number of programs, including the building and destruction of a mandala.

To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu, Wofford Students WoffordStudents@Wofford.Edu

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Wofford College Community

FROM: R. Michael James, Chair
Presidential Search Committee

We are happy to report that the search for the next Wofford president is progressing very well and remains on schedule. The closing date for applications has now passed and we are moving forward. The Search Committee met on Thursday, March 7, and began to select candidates whose backgrounds and experiences seem especially consistent with the qualifications established for the Wofford presidency. The committee will meet again on March 19 to extend our evaluation and to select a small number of candidates who will be invited to confidential preliminary interviews with the Committee early in April. On completion of that round of interviews, the Committee will select candidates to participate in more extensive interviews with representatives of all campus constituencies. We will notify you of the specific methods, dates, and times for this final phase of the search, as soon as they are determined.

We are extremely pleased with the quality of the candidate pool and, as a result, continue to be mindful of the need for complete confidentiality. All of our remaining candidates are engaged in other assignments with very significant responsibilities. To prematurely expose their interest publicly in Wofford's presidency would likely result in their withdrawing from our search. We will move forward with an effort to strike the appropriate balance between maintaining confidentiality with enabling adequate exposure between the candidates and Wofford's people and programs. If you have any questions, please direct them to me through David Beacham (beachamdm@wofford.edu)

Thank you for your continued interest and support.

Guest Speaker, Alfonso Romero Sandoval- The Role of the Endocannabinoid System in Chronic Post-op Pain

Date/Time: 3/12/2013 11:00:00 AM

Location: Roger Milliken Science Center, Room 326

Cost: Free

Details: Major surgeries often produce chronic postoperative pain, but the mechanisms by which this occurs is not fully understood. The endocannabinoid system modulates "pain information" in normal and pathological conditions. The studies presented in this seminar describe how the endocannabinoid system is involved in the mechanisms that induce the resolution of postoperative pain, and how the disruption of endocannabinoid signaling might result in the development of chronic postoperative pain. The techniques used in these experiments include animal (rat) behavior, immunohistochemistry, immunofluorescence, microscopy, confocal microscopy, and pharmacological approaches. By the end of the seminar, information regarding Presbyterian College School of Pharmacy admissions will be presented (brochures with detailed information and PC goodies will be available).

More than Women's Work: Taking Responsibility for Violence Prevention

Date/Time: 3/12/2013 11:00:00 AM

Location: Olin Theater

Cost: Free

Details: As part of this year's Women's History Month, Robert Pleasants will give a talk entitled "More than Women's Work: Taking Responsibility for Violence Prevention" in the Olin Theater, tomorrow, March 12 at 11 a.m. All students, faculty, and staff are welcome to attend to hear how they can be involved in anti-harassment efforts on campus. Robert Pleasants is the Interpersonal Violence Prevention Coordinator and an adjunct professor in Health Behavior at UNC-Chapel Hill. He has been involved in violence prevention in North Carolina since 2001, and has spoken with high school students about abusive relationships since 2004. He currently oversees UNC-Chapel Hill's violence prevention efforts and teaches "Leadership in Violence Prevention," a service-learning course in the Women's and Gender Studies department. He chairs the university's Sexual Assault Relationship Violence Training and Education task force and works with survivors of sexual assault and relationship violence. He has also facilitated anti-sexist men's groups in Durham and currently serves on the North Carolina Sexual Violence Prevention Team.

Today's Events

World Film Series: "Violeta Went to heaven," Olin Teaching Theater
Date/Time: 3/13/2013 3:30:00 PM

Location: Olin Teaching Theater

Cost: Free

Details: Director: Andres Wood Chile, 2011; 110 mins. In Spanish (English subtitles) Like a Chilean Edith Piaf or Bob Dylan, Violeta Parra was a folksinger and pop culture icon whose songs, like "Gracias a la Vida," expressed the soul of her nation and protested social injustice. Violeta Went to Heaven tells Parra's extraordinary story, tracing her evolution from impoverished child to international sensation to Chile's national hero, while capturing the swirling intensity of her inner contradictions, fallibilities, and passions. ? Wofford Theatre Presents: The Clean House

Date/Time: 3/20/2013 8:00:00 PM

Location: Tony White Theater, Campus Life Building

Cost: $5 Students, $12 Adults

Details: Like the last Sarah Ruhl play done at Wofford (Eurydice, 2009), The Clean House is a beautifully poetic and hilariously practical guide to living and dying. At the play's heart are questions about love and the nature and purpose of human existence. Charles Isherwood of the New York Times dubbed it a deeply romantic comedy, "visionary, tinged with fantasy, extravagant in feeling, maybe a little nuts." The house will open at 7:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 8 p.m. The house will open at 1:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 2 p.m. Performances are March 20-23 at 8 p.m. and 23-24 at 2 p.m. For reservations, call the Box Office at 864-597-4080. Date: March 18, 2013 at 11:21 AM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu, Wofford Students WoffordStudents@Wofford.Edu

Dear Members of the Wofford Community,

At its most recent meeting, the Board of Trustees invited the College to join them in a planning process designed to determine strategic direction for the next phase of the College's development. The Board is very pleased to initiate this process as we enter the final stage of our search for a new president. The project promises to engage many members of our community in articulating our collective aspirations for the College—ideas we will continue to develop with our new leader when that person is named. We have engaged Dr. Susan Frost to help facilitate our work. Susan is a consultant who has helped many leading colleges and universities prepare to move forward, and she looks forward to meeting and working with many of you.

We are taking our first steps next Wednesday and Thursday, March 27-28, when members of the faculty, staff, and student body will meet with Susan in small groups to share ideas about our current strengths and opportunities. To form the groups, we have chosen names at random and will invite (via email) those individuals to take part. To assure transparency, faculty, staff, and student names were selected electronically under the respective supervision of Dr. Stacey Hettes, Mr. Jason Burr, and Dean Wood. If you were not selected for this round of talks, please be assured that many other opportunities to contribute will arise. As the process unfolds in the coming months, this project will rely on many members of our community for ideas, energy and insight that will make up its success.

We have formed a planning website to keep everyone up to date. The site is available on the main page of my.wofford.edu.

Thanks for your attention to this very important news.

Wofford Theatre Presents: The Clean House

Date/Time: 3/20/2013 8:00:00 PM

Location: Tony White Theater, Campus Life Building

Cost: $5 Students, $12 Adults

Details: Please join us tonight!! Like the last Sarah Ruhl play done at Wofford (Eurydice, 2009), The Clean House is a beautifully poetic and hilariously practical guide to living and dying. At the play's heart are questions about love and the nature and purpose of human existence. Charles Isherwood of the New York Times dubbed it a deeply romantic comedy, "?visionary, tinged with fantasy, extravagant in feeling, maybe a little nuts." The house will open at 7:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 8 p.m. The house will open at 1:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 2 p.m. Performances are March 20-23 at 8 p.m. and 23-24 at 2 p.m. For reservations, call the Box Office at 864-597-4080. Upcoming Events

Guest Speaker Lewis Hyde on The Cultural Commons

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 11:00:00 AM

Location: Leonard Auditorium, Main Building

Cost: Free

Details: Lewis Hyde, poet, essayist, and cultural critic, will give a talk entitled "The Cultural Commons and Collective Being." Suspicious of the current idea that all creative work is "intellectual property," Hyde turns to America's founders -men like Franklin, Adams, Madison, and Jefferson-in search of other ways to imagine the fruits of human wit and imagination. Hosted by Wofford's Phi Beta Kappa chapter, this event is open to all members of the campus community.

Recital: Akira Satake, Shamisen and Banjo

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 4:00:00 PM

Location: The Sandor Teszler Library Gallery

Cost: Free

Details: The shamisen may be thought of as a traditional Japanese banjo. Its skin-covered body and silk or nylon strings, when plucked with a plectrum, produce the characteristic sharp tones. A potter as well as a musician, Akira Satake first discovered the banjo while growing up in Osaka, Japan. After relocating to New York City in his early 20s, he spend two decades honing his innovative banjo style in venues from Village clubs to Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall. He went on to master the shamisen in his own original style, and has made it an important part of his repertory.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Wofford Community

FROM: R. Michael James '73
Chair, Presidential Search Committee

I am writing to provide another update on the search for the new Wofford president. The Search Committee met on Tuesday, March 19, and selected a small number of candidates who are being invited to participate in confidential preliminary interviews with the Committee early in April. These candidates were selected on the basis of their experience in higher education, the quality of the written materials they presented to the committee, and the results of reference calls made over the last two weeks. They were chosen from a pool of accomplished individuals, many of whose backgrounds and experiences seem especially consistent with the presidential qualities and qualifications established for the search. On completion of these interviews, the committee will select candidates who will be invited to participate in more extensive interviews later this spring. I will write to you again regarding this final phase of the interview process as it unfolds.

The Committee is extremely pleased with the quality of our semi-finalist candidates and we are encouraged by the breadth and depth of experience in higher education that so many of them present. As we learn more about the individuals remaining in the candidate pool, we are reassured about the quality of leadership from which we will choose. If you have any questions, please direct them to me through David Beacham (beachamd@wofford.edu).

Thank you for your continued interest and support.

To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu

PLEASE DO NOT REPLY TO THIS EMAIL. If you are interested or have questions, please email James Detter at detterjr@email.wofford.edu.

As many of you are aware, Wofford College will be hosting its second annual Relay for Life event on Thursday, April 11, 2013, from 6pm-12am. We raised over $14,000 last year, and hope to exceed that amount as well as increase campus involvement, specifically faculty and staff participation. I am personally inviting you all to be a part of our Relay this year. I encourage you to explore the Relay for Life website in hopes that you will decide to take part in this event. You can find pertinent information at www.relayforlife.org. The Relay theme this year will be entitled, Relay around the World. Teams will be asked to choose a specific country for which they will represent during the night of the event. We are hoping to have a faculty and staff team this year. Finally, If you are interested in being a part of the faculty jail and bail, please let me know. The success of this event depends not only on the students, but the faculty and staff as well. We encourage you to bring your families and or significant others as we all walk for hope. Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns. I hope you will join us in the fight against cancer!!

Today's Events

Guest Speaker Lewis Hyde on The Cultural Commons

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 11:00:00 AM

Location: Leonard Auditorium

Cost: Free

Details: Lewis Hyde, poet, essayist, and cultural critic, will give a talk entitled "The Cultural Commons and Collective Being." Suspicious of the current idea that all creative work is "intellectual property," Hyde turns to America's founders -men like Franklin, Adams, Madison, and Jefferson-in search of other ways to imagine the fruits of human wit and imagination. Hosted by Wofford's Phi Beta Kappa chapter, this event is open to all members of the campus community.

Recital: Akira Satake, Shamisen and Banjo

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 4:00:00 PM

Location: The Sandor Teszler Library Gallery

Cost: Free

Details: The shamisen may be thought of as a traditional Japanese banjo. Its skin-covered body and silk or nylon strings, when plucked with a plectrum, produce the characteristic sharp tones. A potter as well as a musician, Akira Satake first discovered the banjo while growing up in Osaka, Japan. After relocating to New York City in his early 20s, he spend two decades honing his innovative banjo style in venues from Village clubs to Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall. He went on to master the shamisen in his own original style, and has made it an important part of his repertory.

Wofford Theatre Presents: The Clean House

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 8:00:00 PM

Date/Time: 3/21/2013 8:00:00 PM

Location: Tony White Theater, Campus Life Building

Cost: $5 Students, $12 Adults

Details: Please join us tonight! Like the last Sarah Ruhl play done at Wofford (Eurydice, 2009), The Clean House is a beautifully poetic and hilariously practical guide to living and dying. At the play's heart are questions about love and the nature and purpose of human existence. Charles Isherwood of the New York Times dubbed it a deeply romantic comedy, "visionary, tinged with fantasy, extravagant in feeling, maybe a little nuts." The house will open at 7:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 8 p.m. The house will open at 1:45 p.m. for shows beginning at 2 p.m. Performances are March 20-23 at 8 p.m. and 23-24 at 2 p.m. For reservations, call the Box Office at 864-597-4080. Seating is limited.

Admission Apprentice

Summary and Qualifications

The admission office is looking for 2 current Wofford juniors to spend the summer working full-time in the admission office. Admission apprentices will be paid while learning all things admission and preparing to do part-time admission work during the following academic year. Apprentices should expect to commit full work weeks over the summer as well as some time to the admission office during his or her senior year. We are ideally looking for applications from current juniors who are creative thinkers, excellent communicators, relationship-driven, organized, and (of course) people who love Wofford. Project management experience is an added bonus and people who have taken initiative to re-work a program or project would be excellent fits. We are looking for applicants with a natural ability to manage all sorts of relationships (students, parents, counselors, etc.) easily and genuinely.

Responsibilities

Responsibilities will vary greatly due to the nature of work in an admission office. However, duties may include but are not limited to:

- planning visit days and special events for prospective students
- interviewing prospective students and speaking with prospective students and families
- helping with special projects
- giving tours and leading information sessions for prospective students and their families
- serving as a panelist during visit events
- working at college fairs
- contributing to the communication flow between the admission office and prospective students
- reading and evaluating admission applications
- gathering and evaluating data for strategic decision-making purposes

Interested?

Submit a resume and brief cover letter (including why you think you'd be a good fit) to Sara Riggs by Monday, April 1, at 12:00 pm. Interviews will take place the week of April 8. Please contact either Sara Riggs (riggssb@wofford.edu) or Jenni Lister (ljsterj@wofford.edu) with questions.

Guy Jacobsohn Memorial Mathematics Colloquium

Date/Time: 3/28/2013 3:30:00 PM

Location: Olin 101

Cost: Free

Details: This mathematics talk is one of a series that is jointly sponsored by Converse, USC Upstate, and Wofford. Refreshments will be served in Olin 204 from 3 to 3:30 p.m. Matt Comer's talk is entitled "1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 20 Error Correction for Linearly Generated Sequences". Here's the abstract: "Given a sequence of values a_1, a_2, \dots , one can easily check if the sequence satisfies the Fibonacci recurrence relation: $a_n + a_{n+1} = a_{n+2}$. But what if the sequence does not match the recurrence relation? We would need to distinguish between false sequence values and a false recurrence relation. Given a sequence generated from an unknown recurrence relation, how would we determine (A) if there are false sequence values and (B) what the recurrence relation should be? In this talk, I will introduce some terminology and tools for computing the shortest recurrence relation of a sequence, show what can go wrong when the sequence contains errors, and provide an application of this work in polynomial interpolation."

James Fund March Madness Stock Competition Winners

Details: Thank you to everyone who participated in the James Fund's March Madness Stock Competition. The winners this year were Matt Shemanski ($250), Mercedes Jeter ($100), Ben Green ($50), and Tarah Taylor ($50). Hopefully this contest was a fun introduction to picking stocks within the stock market, which is exactly what the James Fund does in real life with our $160,000 stock portfolio. If doing something like this interests you, please visit our website (www.wofford.edu/accounting/jamesfund/) to apply to be a member for next year. Applications are due April 12 and we accept applications from any and all majors. Thanks again for playing!

Have You Purchased "The Cup" Yet?

Details: Fierce Green Fire (FGF) would like to announce the continuation of the second annual sale of "The Cup" starting this Wednesday in front of Burwell from 11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. To purchase these tumblers, simply bring your W number with you to lunch to pay with terrier bucks or pay with cash. There is a limited number so buy while you can. The benefits of these cups (other than the fact they look super cool) is students and faculty get free drinks in Burwell, Zach's, the Michael S. Brown Village Center, and all sports events except for football games, where the drinks are half off. Please help us reduce paper waste on campus by buying and using "The Cup". Thank you, FGF.

Guy Jacobsohn Memorial Mathematics Colloquium

Date/Time: 3/28/2013 3:30:00 PM

Location: Olin 101

Cost: Free

Details: This mathematics talk is one of a series that is jointly sponsored by Converse, USC Upstate, and Wofford. Refreshments will be served in Olin 204 from 3 to 3:30 pm. Matt Comer's talk is entitled "1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 20? Error Correction for Linearly Generated Sequences". Here's the abstract: "Given a sequence of values a_1, a_2, \dots , one can easily check if the sequence satisfies the Fibonacci recurrence relation: $a_n + a_{n+1} = a_{n+2}$. But what if the sequence does not match the recurrence relation? We would need to distinguish between false sequence values and a false recurrence relation. Given a sequence generated from an unknown recurrence relation, how would we determine (A) if there are false sequence values and (B) what the recurrence relation should be? In this talk, I will introduce some terminology and tools for computing the shortest recurrence relation of a sequence, show what can go wrong when the sequence contains errors, and provide an application of this work in polynomial interpolation."

Campus Mass Schedule for Spring Break

Details: There will not be a campus mass Easter Sunday, March 31. However, as everyone returns to the campus on April 7, we will have a special guest celebrant for Divine Mercy Sunday, Father Tim Lijewski, Wofford Class of 1985. Father Tim served as Catholic Chaplain at the University of South Carolina for many years and always brings a wonderful message to his alma mater. The Chaplet of Divine Mercy will be said at 4:30 in Mickel Chapel, mass will be celebrated at 5, and there will be sandwiches for supper after mass, so if you have been traveling back to Spartanburg, please join us. Masses will continue every Sunday at 5 in Mickel Chapel for the remainder of the year.
