Cultural Events at Wofford College and around Spartanburg, week of November 2, 2015

Culture Events at Wofford:

Thursday, November 5, 2015
The Lives of the Artists by Margherita Cole, Artist Talk & Reception, 4:00pm – 6:00pm, Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery
Margherita Cole started drawing comics at seven years old, parodying her beloved pet dog as a part-time superhero. Since then, she has continued to draw various subjects and styles throughout her math classes, until one year she serendipitously decided to take AP Art History in high school--which forevermore changed the way she looked at history and artists, focusing on their lives when they were living, instead of their legacy after death. “The Lives of the Artists” features some of the world’s finest and most infamous artists and their patrons in comics. As Vasari was obsessed with the Renaissance artists and their fabulous lives, Cole spent her summer bringing Leonardo, Michelangelo, Raphael, Caravaggio, The Amazing Bernini, and many others back to life. To come and witness their cartoon shenanigans, stop by the Martha Cloud gallery November 5th from 4-6pm for the reception, and anytime afterwards until the end January. Admission: free

Ongoing:
Julia Elizabeth Tolbert: Her Life through Art, Sandor Teszler Library Gallery
The Sandor Teszler Library Gallery is exhibiting selected works of Southern artist Julia Elizabeth Tolbert (1911-1978). Tolbert was a native of Ninety Six, SC, and her training included time spent at Columbia College, SC, Syracuse University, NY, and the University of Georgia under Lamar Dodd, the well-known Georgia artist. Active through the 1940s into the mid-1950s, she painted various subjects, including Southern landscapes, portraits, still life, and genre scenes. Her works exhibit influences from contemporary styles like the Ashcan school, Charleston Renaissance and expressionism, and her interest in urban realism is evident in many images of African Americans and their lives in the South during 1940s and 1950s. This exhibition utilizes research by Mills Reigel ’15 from her Art History Capstone project. October 5, 2015 – November 27, 2015

Abstractions from the Wet Plate Collodion Process by Bryan Hiott, Great Oaks Hall
Using high-resolution digital scans, Bryan Hiott is exploring abstract images from the wet plate collodion process, a 19th century form of photography with which he makes tintypes, ambrotypes, and glass plate negatives. These abstractions are the result of organic reactions in the chemistry of the process. Each collodion emulsion must be hand poured directly onto a glass or metal plate before it is made light sensitive in the darkroom. The flow of the emulsion plays a significant role in image formation. Changes in temperature, humidity, and UV light levels also influence the final result. The abstractions offer various visual possibilities. While revealing fractal patterns and traces of the chemistry, the images might also suggest satellite views of the Earth, surface details of other planets, or microscopic organisms. October 1, 2015 – November 14, 2015
The Lives of the Artists by Margherita Cole (2015 Whetsell Fellowship Exhibition), Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery

Wofford Theatre presents: Straight White Men by Young Jean Lee, Tony White Theater

STRAIGHT WHITE MEN is the outrageous and controversial new comedy by Young Jean Lee, a writer, director, and filmmaker who has been called "the most adventurous downtown playwright of her generation" by the New York Times and "one of the best experimental playwrights in America" by Time Out New York. STRAIGHT WHITE MEN is both an aggressive and timely exploration of patriarchy, privilege, and sexual identity, and a hilarious comedy with a surprisingly compassionate heart.

Performances at 8 p.m. November 5-7 and November 11-14

Testimony to the Human Spirit: A Holocaust Survivor’s Story, 3:00pm, Hartness Auditorium, Carmichael Hall, Converse College
Born in 1931 in a small Polish town, Skarżyńsko-Kamienna, Robbie Waisman worked in various concentration camps as a slave laborer in ammunition factories. Liberated at the age of 14, he was one of about 900 boys from the Buchenwald Nazi concentration camp. He and his sister were the only two from their family who survived the horrors of the Holocaust. Please join us for a thought provoking experience about the resiliency of the human spirit with Mr. Waisman. No RSVP is needed, but attendees are encouraged to arrive early to secure good seating.

Thanks to our generous sponsors, this opportunity is free and open to the public: Furman University, St. Francis Bon Secours, The Humanities Council of SC, Greenville Health System, South State Bank, Converse College, Saint Joseph’s High School

Of Mice and Men, Chapman Cultural Center theater
Migrant workers George and Lennie dream of owning their own ranch someday, a story that gives them hope as they travel from place to place. When the impossibility of that dream meets harsh reality, it brings George to the brink of an unimaginably difficult choice. Beloved by generations of readers and brought vividly to life onstage, Nobel Prize winner John Steinbeck’s classic Of Mice and Men is a heartbreaking and powerful portrait of the human spirit. Presented by the Spartanburg Little Theatre.
Tickets: $25/Adults, $24/Seniors, $20/Youth.

Stages of Alzheimer’s Disease
Alzheimer’s disease typically progresses slowly in three general stages — mild (early stage), moderate (middle stage), and severe (late stage). Since Alzheimer’s affects people in different ways, each person will experience symptoms - or progress through Alzheimer’s stages - differently. Be aware that it may be difficult to place a person with Alzheimer’s in a specific stage as stages may overlap.

The symptoms of Alzheimer’s disease worsen over time, although the rate at which the disease progresses varies. On average, a person with Alzheimer’s lives four to eight years after diagnosis, but can live as long as 20 years, depending on other factors.

Changes in the brain related to Alzheimer’s begin years before any signs of the disease. This time period, which can last for years, is referred to as preclinical Alzheimer’s disease.

Although the onset of Alzheimer’s disease cannot yet be stopped or reversed, an early diagnosis can allow a person the opportunity to live well with the disease for as long as possible and plan for the future.

National Alzheimer’s Disease Awareness Month
November is National Alzheimer’s Disease Awareness Month. Alzheimer’s disease (AD), the most common cause of dementia, is a major cause of morbidity and mortality worldwide.

What is Alzheimer’s Disease?
- The most common form of dementia.
- A progressive disease beginning with mild memory loss possibly leading to loss of the ability to carry on a conversation or respond to the environment.
- Involves parts of the brain that control thought, memory, and language.
- Can seriously affect a person’s ability to carry out daily activities.
- One of the top 10 leading causes of death in the United States.

Who has Alzheimer’s Disease?
- In 2013, an estimated 5 million Americans aged 65 and older had Alzheimer’s Disease. By 2050, unless more effective ways to prevent and treat the disease are identified and implemented, the prevalence may triple to as high as 14 million people.
- The symptoms of the disease first appear after age 60 and the risk increases with age.
- Aging is the best known risk factor for developing Alzheimer’s disease. The likelihood of developing Alzheimer’s doubles about every five years after age 65.
- Alzheimer’s disease is now the 5th leading cause of death and 5th among adults 65–85 years of age.

How is Alzheimer’s Disease Treated?
Although there is no known cure for Alzheimer’s disease, active medical management can improve the quality of life for individuals living with Alzheimer’s disease and their caregivers. Treatment focuses on several different aspects:
- Helping people maintain mental function.
- Managing behavioral symptoms.
- Slowing or delaying the symptoms of the disease.

What’s the burden of Alzheimer’s disease?
- In 2010, the direct and indirect costs of dementia among those aged 70 and over totaled an estimated $159 billion to $215 billion. The direct healthcare expenditures were significantly higher than cancer and similar to heart disease.
- In 2013, total direct payments for all healthcare, long-term care, and hospice services incurred by those aged 65 years and older with Alzheimer’s and other dementias were estimated to be $203 billion.
- By 2040, these costs are projected to jump to between $379 and more than $500 billion annually.
- Death rates for Alzheimer’s disease are increasing, unlike heart disease and cancer death rates that are on the decline. Dementia, including Alzheimer’s disease, has been shown to be underreported in death certificates and therefore the proportion of older people who die from Alzheimer’s may be considerably higher.
Spotting the Signs of Alzheimer’s

Early diagnosis gives individuals a better chance of benefiting from treatment and helps them plan for their future.

What are the warning signs of Alzheimer’s?

Family members, friends and co-workers are usually the first to notice the problems. The affected person may or may not be aware of any changes. A person with any of the following symptoms should see a doctor for an evaluation:

- Memory loss that affects job skills. It’s normal to occasionally forget an assignment or a colleague’s phone number. But it’s not normal to forget things frequently or to be so confused or unable to concentrate that you can’t do your work.
- Difficulty performing familiar tasks. Once again, it’s normal to go to the store and forget to buy an item you wanted. But it’s another matter to forget to pay for your purchases at the store.
- Problems with language. Just about everyone has drawn a blank on someone’s name, but forgetting names of common items or forgetting simple words and substituting inappropriate ones may be a sign of Alzheimer’s.
- Disorientation to time and place. It’s normal to lose track of the time or momentarily get disoriented in an unfamiliar setting, but people with Alzheimer’s can forget what year it is or get lost in their own home.
- Loss of judgement. Forgetting to bring an umbrella when it looks like rain is an ordinary oversight. But not knowing to bring an umbrella when it’s about to rain is a warning sign. So is wearing a winter coat on a hot day, wandering along a busy highway in the middle of the night or leaving a young child alone all the time.
- Changes in mood or behavior. Everyone feels moody at times, but rapid changes in mood without cause — laughing one moment, shouting in anger the next — are not normal.
- Problems with abstract thinking. Many people make an occasional mistake in their checkbook or have trouble figuring out fractions in a recipe. People with Alzheimer’s, though, may forget how to add and subtract or fail to recognize numbers.
- Misplacing things. Being careless or disorganized may make it hard to find your car keys or eyeglasses. But people with Alzheimer’s may put the car keys in the freezer, then not recall where they are. Or they may look for their glasses in strange places, such as the fish bowl, and not think their behavior is odd.
- Changes in personality. As people mature and age, their personalities may gradually change. A person with Alzheimer’s, though, undergoes dramatic and often sudden changes. For instance, a cheerful, outgoing person may become timid and suspicious.
- Loss of initiative. It’s normal to get bored with the daily grind of work and home every so often and lack the energy to start chores. It’s not normal to have to be prompted and encouraged to do ordinary tasks, such as dressing or taking a forkful of food.

Is it normal or is it Alzheimer’s?

Most of us forget to do things at times. Many of us misplace our keys or eyeglasses on occasion. Usually these are just normal glitches in how our memories work. How can these normal events be distinguished from Alzheimer’s warning signs?

Simply put, it’s a matter of degree. Doctors explain that you need to look at the functional consequences of what someone can’t remember. For example, if Mom forgets where she put her car in the parking lot at the mall, that may be normal. But if she walks home from the mall because she forgot she took her car, that’s not.

This Month’s Q&A: Ask the Expert

Q: What is dementia?

The term "dementia" is not a disease. Dementia is an umbrella term for disorders where the mental functions break down, causing confusion, disorientation and memory loss. There may also be trouble with language or completing tasks. Dementia is caused by many conditions. Some conditions that cause dementia can be reversed, and others cannot. The two most common forms of dementia in older people are Alzheimer’s disease and vascular dementia.

Reversible causes of dementia include vitamin B12 deficiency, poor nutrition, side effects of medications, thyroid problems, untreated infections, depression, sleep apnea and normal pressure hydrocephalus. Medical conditions like these can become serious and should be treated by a doctor as soon as possible.
The brain is a complex system much like a computer. In Alzheimer’s, something goes wrong with this system, although researchers have yet to identify exactly what the malfunction is.

How does Alzheimer’s destroy the brain?
In a brain affected by Alzheimer’s, there are abnormal bundles of twisted fibers in the nerve cells, called tangles, and abnormal protein deposits surrounding the nerve cells, called plaques. The combination of tangles and plaques seems to interfere with brain function, especially memory. Although many older people develop some plaques and tangles, people with Alzheimer’s have them to a much greater extent.

Searching for Causes
- Abnormal proteins. Amyloid is a protein normally produced in the body. But, in people with Alzheimer’s, there’s an abnormal buildup of this protein. The buildup forms plaques around the nerve cells, interfering with their function. This alone may cause Alzheimer’s-related brain tissue damage. Or, there may be a defect in the protein or an abnormal response to the protein, either of which may trigger an inflammatory response leading to damaged brain cells. It’s possible a combination of these and other factors are at play in the development of Alzheimer’s.
- Faulty genes. A genetic default may be responsible for the development of an unusual form of protein. Forty percent of people with Alzheimer’s have a protein called ApoE4. But not everyone with the gene for ApoE4 develops Alzheimer’s and not everyone with Alzheimer’s has the gene; it can’t be the only cause. Other genes have also been implicated. For example, research has found that people with Down syndrome develop tangles and plaques in their brains similar to those found in brains with Alzheimer’s.
- Defective chemical messengers. One nerve cell communicates with another by releasing chemicals called neurotransmitters. People with Alzheimer’s have a lower than normal level of a neurotransmitter called acetylcholine. Other neurotransmitters have also been shown to be lower in some people with Alzheimer’s, but none to the same degree.
- Environmental toxins and viruses. Environmental factors that have been studied include aluminum, zinc, food-borne poisons and viruses.
- Calcium Overload. Nerve cells need calcium to transmit signals. But too much calcium can kill a cell, so calcium levels are normally regulated by various mechanisms in the body. A breakdown in any one of the mechanisms could cause the degeneration of nerve cells seen in Alzheimer’s.
- Abnormal glucose metabolism. Nerve cells depend on glucose, a sugar molecule, for energy. When the metabolism of glucose is disturbed, the cells may not be able to manufacture neurotransmitters such as acetylcholine, or they may react abnormally to such chemical messengers. Eventually they die. Researchers are trying to find out whether the abnormal glucose metabolism seen in people with Alzheimer’s is a cause or effect of the disease.

Risk Factors
Risk factors for Alzheimer’s are divided into ones that are well established and others that are possible, but still being studied. None of the risk factors predict development of the disease. They simply suggest an increased risk.

Well established:
- Increasing age. Simply put, the older you are, the greater the risk.
- Family history and genetics. Early onset Alzheimer’s is thought to be caused by a defective gene passed down through the family. There may also be a genetic link between Down syndrome and Alzheimer’s. The increased presence of the unusual protein called ApoE4 can be detected by laboratory tests.

Possible Factors:
- Environmental. Environmental factors probably influence any genetic predisposition. Various studies have linked Alzheimer’s to specific environmental factors, such as zinc and foodborne poisons.
- Head injury. The Alzheimer’s Association says that there appears to be a strong link between serious head injury and future risk of Alzheimer’s. However, that link may only apply to people who already have a genetic susceptibility to Alzheimer’s disease.
- Vascular disease. Heart disease, stroke and high blood pressure all damage blood vessels that carry oxygen and nutrients to the brain and may contribute to the development of Alzheimer’s. More and more studies are finding associations between cardiovascular diseases and Alzheimer’s.
- Gender and education. Female gender and low education level may play a role in the likelihood of developing Alzheimer’s.

In the end, Alzheimer’s may turn out to be a medical whodunit with many culprits all interacting and influencing each other, but not one of them causing the disease on its own. Whatever the cause or combination of causes, researchers have a way to go before solving the mystery.

EXERCISE TIP
Exercise can prevent Alzheimer’s disease, and now research shows it works as a great therapy, as well. Vigorous exercise not only makes Alzheimer’s patients feel better, but it makes changes in the brain that could indicate improvements, researchers explained at the 2015 Alzheimer’s Association International Conference.

“Regular aerobic exercise could be a fountain of youth for the brain,” said Laura Baker of the Wake Forest School of Medicine, who led one of the studies.

"Exercise or regular physical activity might play a role in both protecting your brain from Alzheimer’s disease and other dementias, and also living better with the disease if you have it," added Maria Carrillo, chief science officer for the Alzheimer’s Association. “It’s the first time that we can see that exercise can actually enable one to live better with this disease.” The exercisers had far less anxiety, irritability, and depression than those who didn’t work out.

Stuffed Fresh Sardines

In this stuffed sardine recipe, fresh sardines get a cheesy filling before being cooked in olive oil. Serve as a first course or with a salad for an easy supper. View more sardine recipes at www.eatingwell.com.

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup part-skim ricotta cheese
- 1/4 cup finely shredded Pecorino Romano cheese
- 1/4 cup fresh breadcrumbs
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
- 3 large eggs, divided
- Zest of 1 lemon, plus lemon wedges for serving
- 1/2 teaspoon salt, divided
- 1/2 teaspoon ground pepper, divided
- 12 medium fresh sardines, gutted, head and tail left on
- 1/3 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 cups panko breadcrumbs
- 1 1/2 cups extra-virgin olive oil

Directions

1. Combine ricotta, Romano, fresh breadcrumbs, parsley, 1 egg, lemon zest and 1/4 teaspoon each salt and pepper in a medium bowl.
2. Rinse sardines and pat dry. Season the insides with the remaining 1/2 teaspoon each salt and pepper. Stuff each sardine with about 2 teaspoons of the cheese mixture.
3. Place flour in one shallow dish, the remaining 2 eggs (lightly beaten) in a second shallow dish and panko in a third dish. Dip the sardines in the flour, then the egg, then the panko.
4. Heat oil in a large cast-iron skillet over medium-high heat until shimmering but not smoking. Fry the sardines, in batches, until golden brown, 2 to 4 minutes per side, reducing the heat as needed. Serve immediately, with lemon wedges.

Fish for Thought

Sardines provide plenty of essential nutrients, earning them a place in a "Diabetes Forecast" list of five superfoods you should be eating. These nutritional powerhouses may have a bit of a bad reputation due to their strong taste and smell, but if you get past this, you’ll be able to reap the potential health benefits of these small fish. One way to do this is to include sardines in pasta sauces and stews, where they will add to the flavor without being overpowering.

Each 3.75-ounce can of sardines packed in oil provides you with 191 calories, 22.7 grams of protein and 10.5 grams of fat, including only 1.4 grams of saturated fat. This is 16% of the daily value for fat, 7% of the DV for saturated fat and 45% of the DV for protein.

Sardines provide 12% of the DV for riboflavin, 24% of the DV for niacin, 137% of the DV for vitamin B-12 and 45% of the DV for vitamin D in each 3.85-ounce can. Riboflavin may help prevent cataracts and migraines, and niacin may lower your risk for Alzheimer’s disease and improve arthritis symptoms, according to the University of Maryland Medical Center. The Linus Pauling Institute notes that getting sufficient amounts of vitamin B-12 may help lower your risk for heart disease and cancer, and consuming enough vitamin D may make you less likely to develop arthritis or cancer.

The Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics recommends that you get an average of 500 milligrams of a combination of EPA and DHA each day. These essential omega-3 fats may decrease your heart disease risk. Just 3 ounces of sardines provides 835 milligrams of omega-3 fats, meeting your needs for the day and then some.

Wofford Campus Community:

Wofford will host Dr. Ben Carson, Republican presidential candidate, at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 2, in Leonard Auditorium. The event is part of the Commander-in-Chief Presidential Forum Series/Hipp Lecture Series. The event is free and open to the public.

It is co-sponsored by the S.C. Republican Party, which will handle general ticketing.

A news release will go out shortly about this event that will include the link where you and the general public will be able to register for tickets. (See below)

All faculty and staff who wish to attend MUST register through SCGOP at the link below. We urge ANYONE (including students) interested in attending to register as soon as possible through this link. (Note that you do not need a “promotional code;” just click on “Register.”)

NOTE: Wofford will have 50 tickets available to be distributed by a random lottery to STUDENTS ONLY who register for this lottery. Information on registration for this lottery will be made available soon, along with information on when the lottery for these 50 tickets will be held. (Remember, this is for STUDENTS only.)

History/Asian Studies Talk
Date/Time: 11/5/2015 4:00:00 PM
Location: Olin Theater
Cost: Free
Details: Dr. Lawrence D. Kessler, professor emeritus of History at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, will help us inaugurate the Asian Studies Program at Wofford with this talk: "Change: Cosmological Speculation in Early China." Dr. Kessler describes his talk as "informative and fun. It deals with abstract symbolism, reminiscent of Robert Langdon's adventures in the Dan Brown novels, constructed by early Chinese thinkers about the workings of the universe and how humans relate to it."

Beyond Food and Evil: Diet, Weight Loss, and Redemption
Date/Time: 11/9/2015 4:15:00 PM
Location: Gray-Jones Room
Cost: Free
Details: Margaret Hass will give a campus-wide talk on how food and religion are intricately linked. Through parables, scripture, or food taboos, religions prescribe what and how to eat, making these dietary practices a key part of religious observation and identity. Scholars in the emerging field of fat studies provide an important critique of the moralizing that surrounds food and weight, placing our current fat phobia in historical and cultural context. The proposed talk will draw on this critique to examine how ideas of morality and redemption pervade cultural attitudes toward food and subsequent media narratives of eating and weight loss, both those that are ostensibly secular and those that are overtly religious.

Date/Time: 11/11/2015 3:30:00 PM
Date/Time: 11/11/2015 7:30:00 PM
Location: Olin Theater
Cost: Free
Details: Director: Sijie Dai; China, France, 2002; 110 minutes; Mandarin and French with English subtitles. "Dai Sijie directs 'Balzac et La Petite Tailleuse Chinoise' ('The Little Chinese Seamstress'), a film adaptation of his own best-selling autobiographical novel. Set in China during the Cultural Revolution of the 1970s, the story follows Luo (Chen Kun) and Ma (Liu Ye), two young men from the city who are sent to a mountain village for re-education in Maoist principles. They work with the peasants under the supervision of the village head man (Wang Shuangbao), who considers their violin to be a symbol of the bourgeoisie. Luo and Ma both fall in love with the little Chinese seamstress (Ziiou Xun), the daughter of the tailor (Chung Zhijun), and they read her forbidden works of Western literature including French writers Balzac and Dumas. The conclusion finds the two men reminiscing about their experiences 30 years later. 'Balzac et La Petite Tailleuse Chinoise' premiered at the 2002 Cannes Film Festival." Ongoing:
Julia Elizabeth Tolbert: Her Life through Art, Sandor Teszler Library Gallery
The Sandor Teszler Library Gallery is exhibiting selected works of Southern artist Julia Elizabeth Tolbert (1911-1978). Tolbert was a native of Ninety Six, SC, and her training included time spent at Columbia College, SC, Syracuse University, NY, and the University of Georgia under Lamar Dodd, the well-known Georgia artist. Active through the 1940s into the mid-1950s, she painted various subjects, including Southern landscapes, portraits, still life, and genre scenes. Her works exhibit influences from contemporary styles like the Ashcan school, Charleston Renaissance and expressionism, and her interest in urban realism is evident in many images of African Americans and their lives in the South during 1940s and 1950s. This exhibition utilizes research by Mills Reigel ’15 from her Art History Capstone project. October 5, 2015 – November 27, 2015
Abstractions from the Wet Plate Collodion Process by Bryan Hiott, Great Oaks Hall
Using high-resolution digital scans, Bryan Hiott is exploring abstract images from the wet plate collodion process, a 19th century form of photography with which he makes tintypes, ambrotypes, and glass plate negatives. These abstractions are the result of organic reactions in the chemistry of the process. Each collodion emulsion must be hand poured directly onto a glass or metal plate before it is made light sensitive in the darkroom. The flow of the emulsion plays a significant role in image formation. Changes in temperature, humidity, and UV light levels also influence the final result. The abstractions offer various visual possibilities. While revealing fractal patterns and traces of the chemistry, the images might also suggest satellite views of the Earth, surface details of other planets, or microscopic organisms.

The Lives of the Artists by Margherita Cole (2015 Whetsell Fellowship Exhibition), Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery
Margherita Cole started drawing comics at seven years old, parodying her beloved pet dog as a part-time superhero. Since then, she has continued to draw various subjects and styles throughout her math classes, until one year she serendipitously decided to take AP Art History in high school—which forevermore changed the way she looked at history and artists, focusing on their lives when they were living, instead of their legacy after death. “The Lives of the Artists” features some of the world’s finest and most infamous artists and their patrons in comics. As Vasari was obsessed with the Renaissance artists and their fabulous lives, Cole spent her summer bringing Leonardo, Michelangelo, Raphael, Caravaggio, The Amazing Bernini, and many others back to life. To come and witness their cartoon shenanigans, stop by the Martha Cloud gallery November 5th from 4-6pm for the reception, and anytime afterwards until the end January. Wofford Theatre presents: Straight White Men by Young Jean Lee, Tony White Theater
STRAIGHT WHITE MEN is the outrageous and controversial new comedy by Young Jean Lee, a writer, director, and filmmaker who has been called "the most adventurous downtown playwright of her generation" by the New York Times and "one of the best experimental playwrights in America" by Time Out New York. STRAIGHT WHITE MEN is both an aggressive and timely exploration of patriarchy, privilege, and sexual identity, and a hilarious comedy with a surprisingly compassionate heart.
Performances at 8 p.m. November 11-14

Reading with George Singleton, 7:00pm – 8:00pm, Hub City Bookshop
Join us for a reading with George Singleton, author of the new book Calloustown. Calloustown is a collection of fifteen linked stories that deals with a small, southern, ghost town-like ex-town populated with denizens intent on re-inventing themselves. George Singleton has written six collections of short stories, two novels, and an instructional book on writing fiction. He also holds an MFA degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Singleton was the longstanding teacher of fiction writing and editing at the South Carolina Governor's School For The Arts & Humanities in Greenville, SC. In 2009, Singleton was a Guggenheim Fellow, and in 2011 he was awarded the Hillsdale Award for Fiction by The Fellowship of Southern Writers. In 2013, Singleton accepted the John C. Cobb Endowed Chair in the Humanities at Wofford College where he currently teaches. Singleton was inducted into the Fellowship of Southern Writers in April 2015

Graduate Chamber Recital: Mari Hashimoto, Violin, 3:30pm, Daniel Recital Hall
Mari Hashimoto, will perform music for piano trio with Converse piano graduate student Tiffany Ours and guest cellist Emma Johnson. The trio will perform Piazzolla's Milonga del Angel and Debussy's Piano Trio. Argentinean composer Astor Piazzolla was known for bringing the tango to the concert state—his Milonga del Angel is one of the finest examples his work. Debussy's trio was written when he was just 18 years old and is very sweet, charming, and playful. Mari Hashimoto is a graduate student studying violin performance with Sarah Johnson, and she recently was a featured soloist with the Converse Symphony Orchestra as one of the 2015 Young Artist Competition winners. She performs as an apprentice with the Spartanburg Philharmonic and can be found frequently performing in the Upstate community at churches, weddings, and Greenville downtown. Ms. Hashimoto also teaches through the Converse College's Lawson Academy.

Of Mice and Men, Chapman Cultural Center theater

Migrant workers George and Lennie dream of owning their own ranch someday, a story that gives them hope as they travel from place to place. When the impossibility of that dream meets harsh reality, it brings George to the brink of an unimaginably difficult choice. Beloved by generations of readers and brought vividly to life onstage, Nobel Prize winner John Steinbeck’s classic Of Mice and Men is a heartbreaking and powerful portrait of the human spirit. Presented by the Spartanburg Little Theatre.

Tickets: $25/Adults, $24/Seniors, $20/Youth.

Dear Wofford Family:

As America prepares to salute our veterans on Wednesday, Nov. 11, we at Wofford College remember all veterans, especially those in the Wofford family who have served our country (both at home and abroad), those currently serving and those who are on campus right now preparing for lives of leadership and service through the military.

A group of Wofford students formed the Southern Guard Battalion as a volunteer infantry company in the 1850s, not long after the college was founded. After World War I, Wofford was one of the first colleges to secure a unit of the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC). The battalion was formally established on Oct. 18, 1919, with 118 members. The late Olin D. Johnston ’21, who went on to serve as governor of South Carolina and as a U.S. Senator, was the first battalion commander.

Today, Wofford cadets still take classes in Main Building. They still train, wear their uniforms on campus and earn their commissions during Commencement weekend. Watching them receive their first salute remains a meaningful and touching part of the Wofford experience.

This year, in honor of Veteran's Day, I'd like to share a story (below) about current Wofford cadet Timothy Edge ’17 written by another Wofford student, Kelsey Aylor ’18. Both make us proud.

With Appreciation,
In the line of fire

Wofford student and Southern Guard Battalion cadet volunteers with local fire department as a first-line responder

“A nation that distinguishes its scholars from warriors will soon find its decisions made by cowards and wars fought by fools.” Thucydides

For Simon Stricklen, enrollment scholarship officer for Wofford College’s Southern Guard Battalion Army ROTC (reserve officer training corps), the above quote exemplifies the necessity of the military training program, especially on a liberal arts campus.

Cadet Timothy Edge ’17, a government major from Gaffney, S.C., provides an outstanding example of why.

For Edge, a member of the Southern Guard Battalion, work doesn’t stop on the weekends. On top of his schoolwork and ROTC commitments, Edge returns home to Gaffney every weekend to volunteer with the Grassy Pond Fire Department. Edge joined the volunteer service shortly after his family’s move to Gaffney. On free days, he works with AmbuStar, a company that provides EMS services for Cherokee, Union and Spartanburg counties.

Edge began training when he was 17 and has been working for two years.

“I took training in-house because that fit best with my schedule. There are classes in basic and advanced firefighting, different aspects of truck operation and basic emergency medical responder knowledge,” says Edge.

According to Edge, the Grassy Pond department receives about 350 calls a year, the majority of which are medical calls or motor vehicle accidents. The department covers 32 square miles and covers a seven-mile stretch of I-85.

“One of the most memorable calls I responded to was for a structure fire in the city of Gaffney,” says Edge. “It was Christmas Day in 2013, and while we were responding, a ceiling came down on the crew I was with.”

Recently, Edge was featured in a photo on the front page of the Gaffney Ledger newspaper for his assistance at the scene of a two-car collision.

“A pickup truck had been overturned in the collision, and we had to extricate the driver. He was trapped in the seatbelt and had some injuries on his left side,” says Edge. “We pulled the roof back off the truck and worked alongside the medics to free and stabilize him.”

It’s just another day preparing to be in the line of fire for Edge, a contracted cadet with Wofford’s ROTC battalion. In return for a scholarship, he has made a minimum eight-year service commitment to the Army following graduation. Edge hopes that during his career in the Army and beyond, he can continue to work as a fire and medical responder.
“I really do enjoy the fire service, and I enjoy the EMS side of rescue as well,” he says. “Wherever I end up living in the future, I hope there is a volunteer service so that I can become involved with it and with EMS, preferably at the supervisor level.”

For now, Edge continues to put academics first, knowing that his placement in the Army depends largely on his Wofford GPA.

Edge received the Rookie of the Year award in 2013 for his work with the fire service and says that he is grateful to participate in something he enjoys.

“The big takeaway from my time with the fire service goes into managing yourself in awkward or uncomfortable situations and seeing how supervisors manage things,” says Edge. “Whenever I’m with EMS, I ride with the supervisor, and I’m able to see somebody in real time managing three or four different things going on at once, between phone calls and radio traffic. It’s a teachable moment that I feel ties back into and benefits both the academic and military side of my life as well.”

Stricklen believes that Edge personifies Army values.

“Timothy Edge is not only a good cadet, but a great young man. He chooses to spend his free time in Gaffney, pulling people out of burning cars, which speaks so much about his character,” says Stricklen. “He exemplifies the characteristics I expect out of my cadet corps – loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage. If we had a few more people like him, the world might be a little bit better. And that speaks to the Wofford brand, too. We have students who are engaged locally and globally, who are trying to help others.... I think you need to have a liberal arts-educated officer corps in order to provide that well-rounded voice and leadership.”

Wofford events to honor veterans

To honor Wofford College alumni and veterans, the Southern Guards helped organize the Upstate Veteran Stand Down on Oct. 22. The event supports services for veterans such as a career fair, transition housing and VA medical consultations for homeless veterans. The Wofford battalion also will participate in Spartanburg’s local Veteran’s Day parade on Nov. 11 as well as Wofford’s Salute to Service football game on Nov. 21.

“For this football game, Furman’s ROTC cadets will run the game ball from their campus to the Spartanburg County line. Afterward, the Southern Guards will run the ball from the county line to the stadium in order to commemorate the service of our veterans and current active-duty soldiers,” says Stricklen, who hopes this tradition continues in future years.

World Film Series: Balzac and the Little Chinese Seamstress
Date/Time: 11/11/2015 3:30:00 PM
Location: Olin Theater
Cost: Free
Details: Director: Sijie Dai; China, France, 2002; 110 minutes; Mandarin and French with English subtitles. "Dai Sijie directs 'Balzac et La Petite Tailluse Chinoise' ('The Little Chinese Seamstress'), a film adaptation of his own best-selling autobiographical novel. Set in China during the Cultural Revolution of the 1970s, the story follows Luo (Chen Kun) and Ma (Liu Ye), two young men from the city who are sent to a mountain village for a re-education in Maoist principles. They work with the peasants under the supervision of the village head man (Wang Shuangbao), who considers their violin to be a symbol of the bourgeoisie. Luo and Ma both fall in love with the little Chinese seamstress (Ziou Xun), the daughter of the tailor (Chung Zhijun), and they read her forbidden works of Western literature including French writers Balzac and Dumas. The conclusion finds the two men reminiscing about their experiences 30 years later. 'Balzac et La Petite Tailluse Chinoise' premiered at the 2002 Cannes Film Festival." Dear Faculty and Staff,

Wofford College has partnered with EverFi to fulfill the institution’s Title IX training requirements for employees and students. We are pleased to offer Everfi’s employee on-line educational program, Haven for Faculty and Staff. This online education will empower us to make well-informed decisions about issues that affect our students and colleagues. The program is two-part.

Part one is open and available beginning today. Part one takes approximately 45 minutes to an hour to complete. We ask that you complete the assessments at the beginning and end of Part 1 in one sitting, but you can complete the modules that make up the majority of Part 1 in multiple sessions. If you log out of the course, you can come back in at the same point and not lose any of your progress. Please complete part one by December 1, 2015. Thirty (30) days after you complete Part 1, you will receive an email invitation to complete Part 2 Haven for Faculty & Staff, which takes 15-20 minutes to be completed by January 18, 2016.

To get started you will need to register on www.everfi.com/register by entering the registration code 61ed726c and clicking “I’m a student” to create your EverFi account. After registering, you can use www.everfi.com/login to return to your account. Note: when prompted, please enter your nine digit Wofford ID number to receive credit for completion.

Other important information:

- You will need internet access and audio capabilities.
- To avoid technical issues, please use any major browser (e.g., Firefox, Google Chrome, Internet Explorer) released within the previous two years.
- You may take the course in multiple sittings.
- Survey responses are confidential.
- Should you experience problems, technical support is available 24/7 and can be accessed from the “Help” link within the course.

Thank you, and enjoy the course.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Wofford College Community

FROM: Kara Bopp, Chair
      Provost Search Committee

SUBJECT: Search Update
         On Behalf of the Search Committee

The Provost search is underway, and I am writing with an update. The search committee has completed the development of the Search Profile, to be used for all the advertising and recruiting related to the search. A copy will be posted today on our website at http://www.wofford.edu/provostsearch/.

As you review the Search Profile, please pay particular attention to the attributes most highly desired in Wofford’s next Provost. We urge you to suggest people you know who could serve effectively as our next chief academic officer and/or those who might know potential candidates. Please forward their name(s) to our consultants, Tom Courtice, at tbc@agbsearch.com and Melinda Leonardo, at mml@agbsearch.com. The search committee is well aware that the success of our search depends on the involvement of all members of the college community. By nominating strong candidates, you can immediately be involved in the search process.

Over the next several weeks and into the early part of 2016, we will generate the candidate pool through nominations received from you, contacts with national education and foundation officials, inquiries at other colleges and universities, letters to friends and alumni of Wofford, advertising in the Chronicle of Higher Education and other publications, and the work of our consultants.

The search is off to a good start. I will continue to inform you as we enter subsequent stages of the process. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to contact me at BoppKL@wofford.edu if you have questions. Thank you for your interest and support.
To: Wofford Campus Community

Please join us as at 11:15 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17, on the steps of Main Building as Wofford makes an announcement of a significant initiative. (Rain location, Leonard Auditorium)

This initiative will have a major impact on the sustainability programs of the college. It also will have a significant impact on the college’s relationship with the Northside Initiative and community and the community of Glendale, S.C., where the Goodall Environmental Studies Center is located.

Announcement details:

Date: Tuesday, Nov. 17
Time: 11:15 a.m.

Date/Time: 11/16/2015 4:15:00 PM
Mark Bernstein, the Joyce and Edward E. Brewer Chair in Applied Ethics at Purdue University, challenges the dominant philosophical reasoning that argues for the common belief of human superiority. Bernstein argues that we need modifications in our animal-related institutions (e.g., factory farming, hunting, and animal experimentation). Bernstein is the author of numerous books and articles that investigate the proper moral relationship between human and nonhuman animals. He is also a founding fellow of the Oxford Centre for Animal Ethics. Sponsored by the Wofford Philosophy Department.

Wofford students who are legally blind use resources and innate drive to succeed

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — Wofford first-year student Jacey Sohm (above right) is interested in physics, holds a green belt in karate and hopes to study abroad in Germany during her junior year. She’s also legally blind.

Diagnosed with optic nerve atrophy at 18 months, Sohm says she was treated as normally as possible by her parents, and just told to do her best.

Her best meant earning a $10,000 scholarship from the Lighthouse Guild and additional scholarships from Wofford College, the state of South Carolina, the South Carolina State Fair and the Orangeburg County Chamber of Commerce. She graduated at the top of her class from Holly Hill Academy and completed a weeklong summer engineering camp for high school students who are blind or have low-vision.

“I get digital copies of textbooks, and I use an iPad, but I also have some really basic magnifiers. I use my iPhone, laptop, a specialized webcam, and talking calculator,” says Sohm, who gets special seating in class and qualifies for extra time to test. “I usually don't require it.
in class and qualifies for extra time to test. “I usually don’t require it, though,” she says.

The South Carolina Commission for the Blind also helped her develop a set of tools that will help her thrive on Wofford’s campus. Now halfway through her first semester, Sohm says she loves her classes and is looking forward to becoming more and more involved—especially within the physics department.

“A high school physics teacher inspired me to love science and learning. Our class had such fun projects, and physics is so practical and applicable. It’s the science of life,” she says.

Holly Stevens (above left), a Wofford sophomore, is also legally blind. A native of Marion, N.C., she is triple majoring in economics, finance and Spanish.

Stevens was diagnosed with a brain tumor on her optic nerve when she was 6 months old. Two years and 24 rounds of chemo later, she was cancer free but had limited vision.

“I use electronic copies of textbooks so they’re easier for me to magnify, and I have a pair of very thick reading glasses that are basically magnifying glasses. I have a little device called a mini Ruby—it’s closed circuit television. For example, I can put it next to a word and enlarge a label, etc. It’s really helpful for grocery shopping and reading,” says Stevens.

Originally, Stevens says she was drawn to a college in North Carolina where a friend who is also legally blind had a good experience.

“I applied to Wofford on a whim and was blown away by the scholarships I got,” she says. “I realized Wofford had everything I wanted.”

According to Stevens, the college provides accommodations in seating, enlarged copies of handouts, emailed copies of notes and presentations, and due to eyestrain headaches—especially when looking at numbers for too long—she receives extended time on tests and projects if necessary.

“Oftentimes, because blindness is uncommon, it’s hard for schools to know how to help. You have to know what you need, and I’ve learned that the hard way. I’m still learning what accommodations I need,” she says. “Because Wofford is a small college and so personal, I think people here are more willing to learn and to accommodate me, partly because they do that for everyone.”

Both Stevens and Sohm have learned to make the best of their vision challenges, and both say that while they have to be accepting of their blindness in order to best manage it, they also have to have an attitude that propels them forward despite their hindrances.

“It doesn’t really matter that you’re blind. It really matters what attitude you have in conquering obstacles,” says Sohm. “You really have to have faith in yourself that you can do it.”
Wofford College, established in 1854, is a four-year, residential liberal arts college located in Spartanburg, S.C. It offers 25 major fields of study to a student body of 1,650 undergraduates. Nationally known for the strength of its academic program, outstanding faculty, study abroad participation and successful graduates, Wofford is home to one of the nation’s 283 Phi Beta Kappa chapters. The college community enjoys Greek Life as well as 18 NCAA Division I athletics teams.

We have been keeping a close eye on the news and events surrounding the tragic attacks that took place in Paris yesterday.

We are pleased to tell you that we have been in touch with our students studying abroad in Paris, and they are safe and unharmed. We also have reached out to our other students in Europe and are continuing to receive reports from them that they are safe as well. They are in touch with us, their programs, their families and friends. We continue to monitor the situation and provide them with not only instructions and assistance during this difficult time, but with the reassurance that the Wolford family is here for them and is keeping them in our thoughts and prayers.

We also ask that you keep the people of Paris and France – especially those lost and injured and their families and friends – in your thoughts and prayers.

We will observe a moment of silence at today’s football game for those impacted by this tragedy.

To: Wofford Campus Community

Out of respect for the loss of student West Summers this weekend, the college has postponed the planned announcement that was scheduled for 11:15 a.m. tomorrow (Tuesday, Nov. 17) at Main Building.

The announcement has been rescheduled for 12:15 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3, on the steps of Main Building. (Rain location is Leonard Auditorium.)

At that time, Wofford will announce a significant initiative that will have a major impact on the college’s sustainability programs. It also will have a great impact on the college’s relationships with the Northside and Glendale communities.

Bag lunches will be made available to students and faculty who have 1 p.m. classes.
To the Wofford Community,

There has been much sadness in the past few days. The campus community is reminded that Mickel Chapel and the Masjid in Main Building, Martha’s Garden near the Pavilion and the Labyrinth at Glendale are available for prayer, reflection and meditation.

Counselors will be available from noon to 1 p.m. in Mickel Chapel each day this week for students to come by for support. Students also may make individual appointments online at the Wellness Center website (https://booknow.appointment-plus.com/6t7g7p3v/). If an appointment is not readily available, please use the Waiting List option and a counselor will be in touch with you in a timely manner to see you.

Please gather with members of the Wofford community at 5 p.m. tomorrow (Tuesday, Nov. 17) as we toll the college bell. We will gather on the College Seal in front of Old Main as we remember the recent victims of terror in Paris, Beirut and other places around the world.

Faculty Talk Series
Date/Time: 11/17/2015 4:00:00 PM
Location: Gray-Jones Room
Cost: Free
Details: Dr. Dave Pittman will present, "Cravings & Aversions: Making sense of taste preferences." The talk will explore how the same food item may taste very different to us depending on influences like our environment, hunger, and learning/memory. Research in Pittman's lab is identifying how these changes in taste occur and which parts of the brain are involved. Through understanding how this system works, we could take control of aversions and taste preferences that influence our eating habits. Reception at 3:45 p.m.

Location: The George
Cost:
Details: Join us tonight from 6:30 - 8:00 p.m. when we will be hosting Oxfam America's Hunger Banquet. This memorable and interactive event brings hunger and poverty statistics to life in an intimate dinner setting. When guests arrive, they draw tickets at random that assign each to a high-, middle-, or low-income tier-based on the latest poverty statistics. Each income level has a different dining experience. After the meal is served, guests come together to share their thoughts and experiences. In addition, Kara Ferguson, Director of Service Learning and Community Engagement at USC Upstate, will be giving a presentation on food insecurity in America and what we can do to help relieve hunger in our own community. There are limited spots available so please contact Missy Joyner if you would like to sign up!

Dear Campus Community,

This is an important time in the history of our country. Events held on our campus over the upcoming months will be part of a nationwide conversation, a conversation about which we all have strong feelings and opinions.

Wofford College has a long history of bringing to campus speakers and events of all perspectives — Woodrow Wilson, Gerald Ford, George H.W. Bush, William Jennings Bryan, Buzz Aldrin, Bishop John Shelby Spong, Marian Wright Edelman, Paul Farmer, Nikki Finney, George Pataki, Robert Frost and Carl Sandburg, to name just a few. You will recall that last year we hosted the play “How to become a Lesbian in Ten Days or Less,” and one of our students educated and entertained the campus with Wofford’s first student-run drag show. We are rightfully proud of this history because it demonstrates that we are a community that values differences, even when those differences may be distasteful to some of us. All of these events bring to our community a variety of experiences and viewpoints from which to learn and be informed. We are, as we should be, a safe space for respectful and civil debate, dialogue and expression.

Let us be very clear: The college does not endorse political candidates, opinions or choices when it hosts an event. We extended invitations to all of the leading Presidential candidates, both Democratic and Republican. We continue to pursue candidates on both ends of the political spectrum in an effort to provide a balance in opinion, and we are hopeful that we will have more candidates on campus soon.

A true liberal arts education empowers its recipients with the necessary skills to live “freely and fully.” This tradition is rooted in the American privilege of freedom of speech. Wofford College has a responsibility to celebrate and ensure this tradition in a way that gives voice to all perspectives. And I encourage all members of our community to work to bring speakers to campus that will continue our spirit of open and civil dialogue, thinking and learning.

With appreciation,

Nayef
To: Wofford Campus Community

Wofford will host Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump in the Commander-in-Chief Presidential Forum, part of the Hipp Lecture Series on International Affairs and National Security, at noon on Friday, Nov. 20, in Benjamin Johnson Arena.

This is an opportunity to showcase the Wofford campus to visitors as well as a national audience. We appreciate the accommodations our faculty, staff, athletics teams and others have made to help us make this event possible.

TICKETS:

- Event is sold out.
- Those who have tickets please note:
  - Doors will open at 9:30 a.m.
  - Security checks will be located on the plaza outside the main entrance to the Campus Life Building (where the Terrier sculpture is located).
  - Security will be tight and may bottleneck, so plan accordingly.
  - We suggest that you not bring purses or backpacks to make the security check smoother and quicker.
  - Entrance to Benjamin Johnson Arena will be through the main entrance of the Campus Life Building on the DuPre parking lot side.
  - The doors on the Snyder Field (soccer stadium) side of the Campus Life Building will be open ONLY for non-attendees of the Trump event; event attendees MUST enter through the security checkpoint and through the main entrance to Campus Life.
  - Prohibited items: signs, banners, weapons, chemical agents (such as mace)

GENERAL INFORMATION:

- Verandah parking lot will be CLOSED to any parking at 5 p.m. TODAY (Thursday, Nov. 19). All cars vehicles MUST be removed by 5 p.m.; towing WILL be enforced.
- The first row of the DuPre parking lot (the closest row next to Campus Life) must be cleared by 5 p.m. TODAY (Thursday, Nov. 19) to make way for handicap parking and drop-off. All vehicles MUST be removed from this row by 5 p.m.; towing WILL be enforced.
- Campus Life Building will be OPEN before, during and after the event, including Zach’s and the coffee shop. Those not attending the event should use the entrance on the Snyder Field (soccer stadium) side of Campus Life or the entrance nearest the McMillan Theater.
- Access to restrooms off the Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery will be restricted to those who have been through the security check; all others should use restrooms near the Theater Department green room and McMillan Theater.
- General parking for the event will be located in the football parking lots (Lots C, D and the new paved lot on Cumming Street).
- Golf carts will be provided for pick-up of handicapped and elderly attendees who park in the football parking lots.

Dear Colleagues,

I want to thank Lisa LeFebvre, Beth Wallace, Perry Henson, Kellie Buckner, and Ron Robinson for the session they offered last night called “Support for a Grieving Campus.”

While I’m sure all of us will be thinking a lot more over the coming weeks and months about how to process the many sad and frightening events that have occurred recently in and around our community, I thought it might be helpful to begin by passing on a few things that came up at the session last night.

- For many of our students, this past weekend’s events have been tapping into and stirring up other issues, such as sadness over the deaths of two other Wofford students this summer.

- The counselors present last night also mentioned that even for members of our community who didn’t know any of the students who have died recently, the fact of their deaths, coupled with the recent international trauma in several parts of the world, is leading to a great deal of generalized anxiety.

Many of us on the faculty and staff, I think, are not entirely sure how or what we should be doing to help our students. The counselors who led the meeting last night reminded us that Starfish is in place for faculty and staff to send up flags if we have concerns about any student. Concerns about behavioral/mental health will be seen and attended to by Beth Wallace, Perry Henson, and Kellie Buckner.

The leaders of last night’s session also had a list of helpful services and contacts for those of us among the faculty and staff who might like a little extra help as well. I will be making the slides from last night’s presentation, including the list of counseling resources, available on the Curricular/Co-Curricular website today. (The list of resources is the last slide.)
This website can be accessed via myWofford. On the home page, look all the way to the right-hand side, in the column called “Systems Links.” At the bottom of that column is a link to “Wofford Sharepoint.” You should be able to access the Curricular/Co-Curricular Website that way. Alternatively, you can find it by clicking on the link below:

Many thanks, and good luck with the end-of-semester activities.

Sincerely,
Trina Janiec Jones

Colleagues:

As you know, the college offices will be closed for the Thanksgiving holiday Thursday and Friday, November 26-27. The college will be open and in session on today and tomorrow, November 23-24. We will allow offices to close starting at noon on Wednesday, November 25, with the understanding that essential college services will continue uninterrupted and certain employees may be required to work.

Best wishes for a safe and restful Thanksgiving holiday!

Cultural Events at Wofford College and around Spartanburg, week of November 23, 2015

Culture Events at Wofford:

Monday, November 23, 2015
Wofford Strings Concert, 7:00pm – 9:00pm, Leonard Auditorium
Performance by the Strings classes at Wofford.
Admission: free

Ongoing:
Julia Elizabeth Tolbert: Her Life through Art, Sandor Teszler Library Gallery
The Sandor Teszler Library Gallery is exhibiting selected works of Southern artist Julia Elizabeth Tolbert (1911-1978). Tolbert was a native of Ninety Six, SC, and her training included time spent at Columbia College, SC, Syracuse University, NY, and the University of Georgia under Lamar Dodd, the well-known Georgia artist. Active through the 1940s into the mid-1950s, she painted various subjects, including Southern landscapes, portraits, still life, and genre scenes. Her works exhibit influences from contemporary styles like the Ashcan school, Charleston Renaissance and expressionism, and her interest in urban realism is evident in many images of African Americans and their lives in the South during 1940s and 1950s. This exhibition utilizes research by Mills Reigel ’15 from her Art History Capstone project.
October 5, 2015 – November 27, 2015

The Lives of the Artists by Margherita Cole (2015 Whetsell Fellowship Exhibition), Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery
Margherita Cole started drawing comics at seven years old, parodying her beloved pet dog as a part-time superhero. Since then, she has continued to draw various subjects and styles throughout her math classes, until one year she serendipitously decided to take AP Art History in high school—which forevermore changed the way she looked at history and artists, focusing on their lives when they were living, instead of their legacy after death. “The Lives of the Artists” features some of the world’s finest and most infamous artists and their patrons in comics. As Vasari was obsessed with the Renaissance artists and their fabulous lives, Cole spent her summer bringing Leonardo, Michelangelo, Raphael, Caravaggio, The Amazing Bernini, and many others back to life. To come and witness their cartoon shenanigans, stop by the Martha Cloud gallery November 5th from 4-6pm for the reception, and anytime afterwards until the end January.

Off-Campus Events

Monday, November 23, 2015
Converse Symphony Orchestra: Opera Overturns, 7:30pm, Twichell Auditorium
Join the Converse Symphony Orchestra and conductor John Young Shik Conklin for an evening at the opera! The CSO will perform orchestral overtures from Purcell's Dido and Aeneas, Rossini's L'italiana in Algiers, and Beethoven's Figaro. Rounding out the concert will be Bizet's
Carmen Suite no. 1, which closes with the famous Toreadors procession. Come enjoy an evening of lyric beauty and operatic drama!

Sundays Unplugged, 1:00pm - 5:00pm, Chapman Cultural Center
All of the museums are open, live music and artists on the plaza... Stop by! Relax! Chapman Cultural Center is the ideal place to unplug on Sunday whether you're into art, music, science, history, or shopping local. As part of Sundays Unplugged, all of the museums are open and live music is playing. Singer-Songwriter Concerts set the mood with a different local musician performing on campus each week, 2-4 p.m. Of course, the concert is in addition to all of the museums, most with free admission: Artists' Guild Gallery, Spartanburg Art Museum, Spartanburg Regional History Museum, Spartanburg Science Center, and the Student Galleries. This week’s artist: Frank Walker
Admission: free

Ongoing:
A Dyeing Art: Contemporary Textiles & Fiber Arts, Spartanburg Art Museum
A Dyeing Art: Contemporary Textiles and Fiber Arts is a group exhibition featuring the work of nine artists. Curated as an homage to Spartanburg’s history with the textile industry, the work in this exhibition covers a wide array of textile-related media and techniques, including quilted paintings, wall drawings, fiber sculptures, and felt installations. The themes addressed by these artists vary from the whimsy of childhood to the juxtaposition of multiple cultures to the importance of community involvement in the arts.

3D: Optic Wonders from Special Collections, Student Presentation & Opening Reception, 3:00pm – 5:00pm, Sandor Teszler Library Gallery
Stereoscopes are making a comeback—Get ready to see the world as it appeared more than 100 years ago! The stereoscope, a small headset-viewer introduced to the public at the 1851 Crystal Palace Exhibition in London, mimics the brain’s ability to combine different perspectives from the left and right eyes to perceive depth. Stereoscopes allow for 3D views that give the illusion of immersion in a scene. Viewers in the 19th and early 20th centuries found themselves transported to faraway locales, luxurious palace interiors, and modern industrial sites. In this exhibition, images from stereographs held in Special Collections are enlarged 1200 percent and converted into anaglyph 3D, viewable with the red-and-blue-lensed glasses provided.

The Lives of the Artists by Margherita Cole (2015 Whetsell Fellowship Exhibition), Martha Cloud Chapman Gallery
Margherita Cole started drawing comics at seven years old, parodying her beloved pet dog as a part-time superhero. Since then, she has continued to draw various subjects and styles throughout her math classes, until one year she serendipitously decided to take AP Art History in high school—which forevermore changed the way she looked at history and artists, focusing on their lives when they were living, instead of their legacy after death. “The Lives of the Artists” features some of the world’s finest and most infamous artists and their patrons in comics. As Vasari was obsessed with the Renaissance artists and their fabulous lives, Cole spent her summer bringing Leonardo, Michelangelo, Raphael, Caravaggio, The Amazing Bernini, and many others back to life. To come and witness their cartoon shenanigans, stop by the Martha Cloud gallery November 5th from 4-6pm for the reception, and anytime afterwards until the end January.

Girl Scout Media Takeover, 6:30pm – 8:00pm, Spartanburg Library Headquarters
Media and technology are dramatically changing the way children communicate, receive information, and learn. While there are many positive benefits of increased media exposure, there are many challenges associated with new media, especially with regard to the portrayal of women and girls.
To help Girl Scouts in the Upstate, grades 6-8, learn how to replace negative pressures and imagery within the media with realistic, positive messages and role models, the Girl Scouts of South Carolina – Mountains to Midlands has partnered with NOURISH, a program of Mental Fitness, Inc. The new workshop has been designed to help foster higher self-esteem, positive body images, and healthy relationships.
In culmination of their MEdia Journeys, Cadettes will take the stage to present MEdia Remake Projects at the Girl Scout Media Takeover, in an effort to “talk back” to the media with powerful messages of their own.

A Dyeing Art: Contemporary Textiles & Fiber Arts, Spartanburg Art Museum
A Dyeing Art: Contemporary Textiles and Fiber Arts is a group exhibition featuring the work of nine artists. Curated as an homage to Spartanburg’s history with the textile industry, the work in this exhibition covers a wide array of textile-related media and techniques, including quilted paintings, wall drawings, fiber sculptures, and felt installations. The themes addressed by these artists vary from the whimsy of childhood to the juxtaposition of multiple cultures to the importance of community involvement in the arts.

TO: Campus Community
From: Provost Dennis Wiseman

It is with great pleasure that I announce that Wofford’s Center for Global and Community Engagement (CGCE) now will be known as the Center for Community-Based Learning (CBL) with Jessalyn Wynn Story being named director of the center. Jessalyn also will continue in her role as director of the Bonner Scholars Program.

We are shifting the goals of the center to better align with Wofford’s strategic vision of preparing superior students for meaningful lives as citizens, leaders and scholars. The new name emphasizes not only students’ engagement with community, but also the learning that takes place before, during and after that engagement.

Dr. Ron Robinson, Perkins-Prothro Chaplain and Professor of Religion – who was integral in the establishment of the CGCE and had been its director – now will be the director of Interfaith Programs in addition to continuing with his work as chaplain.

Also, the Halligan Campus Ministry Center now will be known as the Halligan Center for Religious and Spiritual Life. The center houses the office of the director of the center, the office of the chaplain, the Gathering Place, and space for student fellows and interns. Mickel Chapel and the masjid are located adjacent to the center.
